Jurors Challenge Missing Hours

"I loved my wife," Lawrence Ernest Munning said in a signed statement introduced by the crown at his murder trial Wednesday.

"She wanted to die... I did it because I loved her."

The introduction of the confession brought the crown's case against the 41-year-old Oak Bay machinist — on trial for the carbon-monoxide death of his wife Catherine — to a close.

The prosecution admitted that it could not account for a "missing" two hours on the afternoon of Catherine's death.

Explanation Asked

As prosecutor E. George MacMinn told Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court, "That is the case for the crown, My Lord," the foreman of the jury stood and said the jury wanted to put a question to the last prosecution witness.

"We have noticed that the accused says his wife was dead at around 2:30 p.m., maybe 3 p.m. We accept that he drove her body immediately to the RCMP detachment at Colwood," the foreman said.

"But he did not arrive there, according to all the evidence, until 5:10 p.m. Have you any explanation for this missing two hours?"

The crown's final witness, RCMP Cpl. Robert Hugh De Armond, hesitated and then said, "No, sir. We can't account for that time."

Munning is charged with the non-capital murder of his wife, Catherine Josephine Munning, 36, at a Goldstream Park campsite on June 2. The trial enters its fourth day today.

An earlier witness, RCMP Cpl. Harold Peterson, testified that he and Cpl. De Armond had taken a statement from the accused man about an hour after he had brought his wife's body to the station.

'She Wanted to Die'

The confession, signed by Munning and initialed by him on each page, was ruled admissible Tuesday and entered as Exhibit 24 in the trial, which began Monday. Cpl. Peterson read it to the jury.

"I loved my wife," the statement said, "but I did not want to commit her to Esso/ndale. She wanted to die. I promised her I would not let them send her to a place like that."

"My wife was very hard to live with. But I didn't kill her because I hated her. I did it because I loved her. She was going to kill herself anyway. She told her doctors that."

"I went out there (Goldstream Park) with the intention of getting it over with, you know. I thought I would die, too."

"I was going to kill myself, too, but I chickened out. I know I am responsible."

Law, Order Shield Thin

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau hopes that out of Montreal's wildcat police and firemen's strikes with the resulting death, looting, shooting and fire-bombing in the chaotic streets, will come a keener public awareness of the importance of upholding law and order.

It was urgent, he added, that the taxpayers appreciate both the importance of the police and the "very tough" job they face in maintaining order and providing protection.

He underlined it all by repetition of the word "importance." He had spoken in this vein previously — once when addressing students at Queen's University, and again when commenting on the rough-housing that young hooligans had given him at Vancouver.

But Wednesday, coming out of a morning-long cabinet session, he made it sound more urgent than ever.

With what he called "total society running a little amok" — quickly amending this to "a little out of control" — he stressed the "importance of the public standing up for the police."

And too often, when doing their best with "one of the toughest jobs in the country," police have been abused as "pigs, fascists and Gestapo."

While violence and rampage in the streets was "not a Montreal phenomenon," police in that Quebec metropolis had "a harder job" than most.

Yes, he readily conceded, the police strike was "clearly illegal," and while "not condoning it," he said there was "something to say on both sides."

In Montreal, he went on, police had been "pretty badly battered by both criminal and political violence," and this must be "taken into account" in assessing responsibility and blame.

What "political" violence, he was asked?

"Demonstrations, violent ones; attacks, separatism," he replied.

A CBC reporter irritated the prime minister with the question: "Is this the final breakdown of law and order?"

"Certainly not," snapped the prime minister, police had struck at other times and in other places, even in Canada, and there was "no cause for that kind of alarm" over the ravage of downtown Montreal. It was serious enough, but it wasn't the end.

It did, the prime minister emphasized, bring to public attention the urgency "now of

New Mountie Boss 'Entitled'—Once

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said with a grin Wednesday he does not believe RCMP Commissioner William Higgitt will be holding many news conferences.

He was replying to a reporter who asked about the newly-appointed commissioner's statement at a news conference Monday that he hoped the Canadian government would keep down the number of Communist Chinese diplomats here if it exchanged diplomatic missions with Peking because these diplomats would be spies.

Trudeau said he had not read a transcript of Commissioner Higgitt's remarks but that the commissioner was entitled to meet reporters once to express his views. He did not think the commissioner would be seeing the press again too often.

VANCOUVER (CP)—A dozen grain ships will start arriving in Vancouver Saturday and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said again Wednesday that, dock strike or no dock strike, export grain will be moved.

Negotiations continued here Wednesday in a bid to end a pay strike by 3,000 British Columbia longshoremen. Meanwhile 1,300 lowboat officers and engineers said they may strike in a separate dispute.

Three grain ships are in Vancouver but loading has been stopped by the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association, which says the emphasis on grain discriminates against other products.

Pressure for keeping grain moving continued Wednesday. Mr. Mackasey said in Ottawa once more that grain "will move." But again, he didn't say how this will be accomplished.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, also in Ottawa, said that if the strike does not end soon, Parliament should be recalled to end it. Parliament is in recess until Oct. 22.

Mr. Mackasey said ships will start arriving Saturday to move Canada's 80,000,000-bushel wheat sale to China. He gave no details of movement plans but excluded the use of military ships.

Mr. Stanfield said Mr. Mackasey has been "doing a lot of talking" but action is needed.

The labor minister has said he is prepared to ask for recall of Parliament if needed. But he did not know when such a move might become necessary in the public interest.

He said hundreds of Prairie farmers could go bankrupt unless grain moves.

Baby's Name Bathsheba

Medical Science Defied By Sex-Altered Woman

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Dawn Hall Simmons, British-born author who stunned Charleston society with sex-change surgery and a subsequent marriage to a Negro mechanic, now claims to have baffled medical science by giving birth to "a miracle child."

She said the child, a seven-pound girl, was born in the Midwest Sept. 16, but refuses to identify the hospital or her doctor.

In an interview at her home Wednesday, Mrs. Simmons said:

"I believe that God is higher than medical science and that's my explanation. She's a miracle child and will be a great blessing to the black people."

Mrs. Simmons, the former foster son and now foster daughter of British actress Dame Margaret Rutherford, said she named the child Bathsheba Marjorie Margaret Paul Simmons.

"My child will be brought to Charleston in about three weeks," she said. "Then I'm going to put her in a baby carriage and walk her right down on that lily-white battery."

The ante-bellum mansions on the battery, Charleston's historic waterfront, house many of the aristocratic Charlestonians in whose society Mrs. Simmons, then known as Gordon Langley Hall, was once welcome.

Mrs. Simmons who will be 40 on Oct. 16, is married to John Paul Simmons, who now works on a shrimp boat. He is about 25. They were married Jan. 23 by a minister at her historic home on Society Street.

"We named the baby Bathsheba because in the Bible Bathsheba was the beloved of David, and they were criticized for their love," she said.

Mrs. Simmons said the baby, was born a few weeks prematurely because "I had been, so harassed by newspaper people, then my husband had a very bad nerve turn and my doberman pinscher got killed by a car the same day."

Shouldn't Have to Tell—Wallace

Doctors' Income 'Private'

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — The British Columbia Medical Association Wednesday supported a doctor-MLA who said doctors should not have to disclose individual earnings from government medical plans.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace, Social Credit MLA-elect for Oak Bay, said there have been demands for such disclosure. They followed Health Minister Ralph Lofmark's statement that some doctors earn too much under government insurance plans.

The association's annual convention passed unanimously a resolution saying: "Whereas doctors' incomes are not derived from public funds, their individual earnings should not be disclosed."

The convention elected Dr. George J. Gibson of Chilliwack as president, succeeding Dr. Robert M. Lane of Victoria. Dr. Gibson is a former council and school board member in Chilliwack.

The doctors also passed a resolution asking that ambulance drivers lose their right to use sirens and disregard traffic regulations while going to hospitals.

"The use of sirens and the breaking of traffic laws has been shown to shorten the average eight-mile run by only two minutes," said Dr. R. M. Peet, Victoria neurologist.

"The outcome of the cases which get to hospital two minutes earlier doesn't seem to be markedly better than those which arrive a little later, and sometimes the earlier patients arrive in shock because of all the rushing and all the noise."

Dr. Peet, member of the association's traffic and safety committee, said the resolution is aimed at reducing the number of traffic accidents involving ambulances.

U.S. Democrats Ease Pressure for Pullout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two resolutions seeking United States withdrawal from South Vietnam were introduced in the Senate Wednesday, while the Senate Republican leader appealed for tolerance as President Nixon pursues peace efforts.

Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania made that request in a commentary on what proved to be a Democratic show.

At the same time, Scott broadened a bit the definition of "constructive debate" which fits into his bid for a 60-day moratorium on dissent against U.S. policy.

He said one of the resolutions, proposing a pullout unless the government in Saigon begins major reforms within 60 days, fits his terms.

Scott

Iowa) and Thomas F. Eagleton (Dem. Mo.).

Hughes told the Senate Scott's moratorium on criticism might merit consideration "if linked to substantive plans for disengagement."

Hughes and Eagleton would have the Senate declare that unless Saigon ends censorship, releases political prisoners and prepares to yield power to a provisional government — all within 60 days — the United States will end all aid to Vietnam "with all reasonable haste."

Hughes said both Saigon and the Nixon administration "have hardened their already tough lines on the war."

Senators Frank Church (Dem. Idaho) and Mark O. Hatfield (Rep. Ore.) proposed the other measure, to urge American withdrawal after a "reasonable interval" to allow for orderly transition and to guard the safety of U.S. troops and South Vietnamese who might choose to leave with them.

Scott's statement dealt with the Hughes speech.

"This is the kind of constructive debate which I had hoped would emerge," the Republican leader said. "My suggestion that we hold down differences to the quiet and reasonable consideration of alternatives has been respected."

Scott did not comment on the Church speech, which drew a select audience of the Senate's senior Democratic doves.

"I didn't hear it," he said. No Republican did, although one or two entered the chamber briefly during the hour of Vietnam discussion. It never became a debate because nobody was on hand to challenge the dissenters.

Even Republican Hatfield, co-sponsor of the Church resolution, was absent.

Church said Nixon's troop withdrawal plans are only a policy, Church said.

token, and represent a rate which would leave U.S. troops in Vietnam for eight to 10 years.

"It would appear that President Nixon, like President Johnson," is becoming preoccupied with politics to the neglect of the war.

U.S., Nordic Pressures

Stockholm Retreats Abruptly On Proposed Aid for Hanoi

Stockholm (UPI) — The Swedish government pulled back abruptly Wednesday on its projected $40,000,000 aid program for North Vietnam with a declaration that only planning is to be undertaken now and that nothing will be implemented until fighting in Vietnam has ceased.

This was coupled with an additional announcement, apparently intended to satisfy the left wing of the ruling Social Democratic party, that government preparations are also underway for a small aid program for Cuba on family planning and technical training.

UNUSUAL FORM

These disclosures came in the unusual form of a signed article by Swedish Foreign Minister Torsten Nilsson which appeared in the liberal newspaper Dagens

Nilsson

Nyheter. The article was designed to clarify a speech Nilsson made a week ago to the Social Democratic party congress.

He announced to the cheering delegates the government intended to offer North Vietnam a three-year assistance program of grants and credits totalling $40,000,000 and that the assistance would begin before the war ends.

BIG BACKLASH

Although the move was highly popular with the Social Democrats, the backlash from Washington and the other Scandinavian capitals apparently has been a great deal stronger than the Swedish government anticipated.

Washington informed the Swedish Embassy immediately that such a program, even if confined to non-military assistance, might constitute aid to an enemy and necessitate in particular a review of export-import bank credits which have been granted Scandinavian Airlines for the purchase of American aircraft.

FROM OSLO

The reaction from Oslo and Copenhagen was even sharper and more direct. The Danes and Norwegians were incensed at the fashion in which Sweden abruptly granted diplomatic recognition to the Hanoi government in January without the usual prior Nordic consultations.

In this instance they already had agreed with Sweden, in principle, to offer a joint aid program to all of Vietnam — North and South — after the fighting stops.

SLAP IN FACE

Thus, not only did the Swedish action endanger the airlines equipment order, but it also was a slap in the face for Nordic co-operation and common policy-making in a delicate situation. Moreover, the fact the announcement was made at a political rally rather than by the government to parliament has caused resentment and criticism.

As for the Cuban aid, which will be minor, the party congress passed a resolution calling on the government to assist the Castro regime, and Nilsson now has publicly stated, "We have already started preparations, partly in conjunction with United Nations agencies" on an aid program.

MORE TO SHIFT

An American announcement said the navy plans to turn over additional craft to the Saigon government forces in late October.

"By next summer, many of the remaining craft will have been transferred to the Vietnamese navy," a navy spokesman said. "This turnover will release U.S. Navy men for other assignments in Vietnam and in some instances early rotation for personnel nearing completion of this tour (of duty)."

Mekong Advance

U.S. Patrol Boats Given to Allies

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Navy announced Wednesday it was turning over 50 per cent of its naval strike force in the Mekong Delta to South Vietnam. American military spokesmen described it as a "turning point" in the Vietnamization of the war.

Navy spokesmen said 80 river patrol vessels would be transferred to the South Vietnamese Friday in the largest single turnover of naval equipment in the war. It said the move was part of the program turning over a greater share of the war to the Vietnamese.

The move will hand primary responsibility for water patrols in the delta to South Vietnam. Almost one-half of South Vietnam's population of about 17,000,000 persons reside in the delta, where most of the nation's food is produced.

COST LISTED

Navy spokesman said the heavily armed patrol boats are worth about $7,300,000.

The transfer will bring to 229 the number of U.S. naval craft turned over to the South Vietnamese since June, 1968. Spokesmen said these vessels represent about 40 per cent of the original force of about 500 U.S. Navy craft sent to Vietnam.

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese Premier Gen. Tran Thien Kiem said Wednesday he saw little hope for any break in the deadlock Vietnam peace talks until Hanoi resolves leadership problems that have followed the death of President Ho Chi Minh.

Kiem was responding to a request for comment on a statement made Monday by Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) that there ought to be a breakthrough in the war in the next 60 to 90 days.

Kiem said it was difficult to comment because it was difficult to know what actually is going on in Hanoi. However, he added:

"I have followed the Paris peace talks closely. I think there is little hope for a change of policy on their side.

"It is difficult for them (North Vietnam) to make any decisions because, as I see it, no one is strong enough to lead the country."

Politics Clouds Policy

UN Text Blank

Italy's Peking Views Hidden from Envoy

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Italian Foreign Minister Aldo Moro drew a blank on China in the General Assembly Wednesday.

The minister was reading from a prepared speech, copies of which had been distributed to members and the press. When he turned to the page that was to contain references to China he was confronted with a blank piece of paper.

Without flinching, he turned to the next page and continued his speech.

The official UN records of the plenary debate contained the missing references. The Chinese reference from a spokesman for a country that has shown considerable interest in the matter in the past was brief and skirted the question of the Peking regime in the UN.

Moro said that if the UN is to be strengthened it must attain the "universality" which is the basis of its worldwide influence.

"The Italian government therefore trusts that a solution in keeping with this requirement will be reached on the question of China," he said.

Italy has expressed interest in recognizing Communist China. In the past it has rejected the annual resolution calling for the seating of Communist China and the expulsion of the Nationalists. It has called in the past, without much support, for a UN study of the whole question of China representations.

There has been no indication how Italy will vote this year.

Night of Shame in Montreal

MONTREAL HAS HAD ITS NIGHT of shame and the rest of the country will commiserate with the victims of the anarchy which ruled there briefly while policemen and firemen refused duty.

The strike by these two essential services, and the consequences, must impress upon the various levels of government the necessity for designing safeguards in law against a repetition. But at the same time there must be adequate machinery for the protection of the interests of these vital services so that men will not feel they are suffering injustices.

Certainly the two services' strike was irresponsible. Particularly reprehensible was the interference of city policemen with the Quebec Provincial Police officers who were trying to control the dangerous situation. Those who attacked the provincial constables and in one instance overturned one of their patrol cars provide proof that there is a hot-headed element of radicals in the Montreal force who should not be entitled to wear their shields . . . emblems of a service that is supposed to uphold the law for the protection of the people.

But there is also evidence that within the city force there are many who were dubious about the strike decision and who would never have accepted it if they could have foreseen the disaster it generated.

Disaster it certainly was, with one Provincial policeman shot to death and scores of injured among the rioters and those who courageously resisted them. The property damage cannot yet be calculated, but it will run into millions. And among the victims of the senseless mob was Montreal's competent and devoted Mayor Jean Drapeau, whose newly-opened restaurant, Le Vaisseau d'Or, was left a shambles only a fortnight after his home was destroyed by a dynamite blast.

The behavior of the hoodlum element which shocked and frightened Montrealers might be thought to be out of character with Canadians. In emotion-charged occasions, such as the Vancouver clash between unemployed and police in 1938, the Winnipeg disorders during the general strike of 1919 and the disgraceful Halifax looting which developed from over-enthusiastic celebration of the war's end, excuses could be found for the rioters.

But in Montreal there was none. Gangs, including taxi drivers long in dispute over what they believe are unfair contracts for airport service, simply took advantage of the breakdown of the law enforcement machinery.

Who can say it could not happen elsewhere? No community dare risk it. Montreal's unhappy experience is sufficient warning that in no circumstances should the services for the public protection be allowed to falter.

Air Defence System Failure

THE FACT THAT a foreign warplane succeeded in getting within 65 miles of the Florida coastline before being picked up by radar and then was able to duck under its screen until it was within striking range of a major U.S. air force base, raises serious doubts about the efficiency of the whole North American air defence system.

It might have been expected that the Florida area due to its geographic position in relation to Cuba would have been considered by the U.S. defence department an especially sensitive one and subsequently well protected by ample warning and detection devices. Either this was not the case or the system failed through human or mechanical error.

This was not the first time the vulnerability of the United States to air attack has been proved. Several years ago a distinguished and internationally respected defence correspondent reported in a British newspaper that aircraft of Britain's V-bomber force had successfully penetrated alerted U.S. defences and could have bombed several major American cities had the two countries been at war.

The story was not published in the United States and the incident was hushed up in Britain, probably to save face all round.

Whether or not the report was true will probably never be known. However, what is known beyond any doubt whatsoever is that the U.S. defence system in the Florida peninsula has proved wholly ineffective. This should be a matter of concern not only to Washington but also to Ottawa in that Canada relies almost entirely upon the United States for protection against enemy air attack.

If the United States air defences are so lacking for its own key areas, how much more ineffective must they be for such relatively unimportant areas such as Canada?

Rather than expending all its time and energy looking for ways and means to reduce Canada's armed forces, our defence department might be better advised to concern itself with developing our own defence systems to protect our own country — and our own citizens.

Car Cosmetics

A U.S. SAFETY organization has proved that today's automobile bumpers don't deserve the name. Driven into a concrete barrier at only five miles an hour, four standard American cars sustained damage ranging from $134.35 to $352.55 and at 10 miles an hour, the damages soared to a high of $814.90.

There appeared to be some doubt at a hearing in which these facts were produced, however, that the public would prefer real impact-absorbers to the "largely cosmetic bumpers." Perhaps it wouldn't. But the figures should help alter its outlook.

Hard Time for the Politicians

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

THERE'S a tough, no-holds-barred breed of newsmen been taking over on Parliament Hill, and the puzzled politicians don't know quite how to cope with them.

They're the hyper-aggressive types from private radio and television stations and networks.

They make even the minority element of anti-American, pro-dissent-and-protest propagandists of the CBC look and sound like Little Lord Fauntleroy.

Only Prime Minister Trudeau, John Diefenbaker, George Hies and Stanley Knowles among the stars of Parliament seem able to handle them.

"Trendy," as they call the prime minister, manages it by being Parliament's hottest news product.

But the sheer news-compulsion of his position at the pinnacle of power perhaps wouldn't have been enough without personality and a particular kind of "pov."

For Conservative Leader Stansfeld too has position — though not quite so compelling of attention — but he's nowhere near the polished performer that either of his rivals, "Trendy" or "The Chief," is. Dief does it with a brilliant display of his own brand of crusty-yet-folky showmanship. (And notice how he almost monopolizes the "Tory Time" on TV and radio news shots.)

George Hies swings it with the bezzazz of a mellowly maturing "go-go guy."

For gaunt and ghostly Stanley Knowles, it is a convincing blend of sincerity, dignity, rectitude.

But to most of the others, the less-than-stars, the supporting cast of Parliament, the hot-flash news world of radio and TV is a cold and frightening place.

The electronic reporters can stand External Affairs Minister Sharp before their mikes and cameras and give him the kind of verbal going-over he might sooner expect in a police interrogation room.

"Answer yes or no," one of them barked at him the other day when he waffled on a question about getting the run-around from the Red Chinese in his pathetic chase after recognition by Chairman Mao.

"But how can I answer yes or no," pleaded Sharp. "To a question like that?"

"Just go ahead and answer it," they ordered him and, browbeaten, he further floundered around.

Then there is Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford, one of the leading exponents in the non-art of boobying it up on the boob tube.

Out in Vancouver, seeming to forget that what a cabinet minister might say on the West Coast routinely gets reported everywhere across the land — telegraph and telephone, not to mention radio or TV not being exactly new inventions — he promised a federal investigation of "the entire auto industry" if there was any major increase in the price of new models.

When he got back to Parli-ment Hill — the day GM announced a $117 price hike, Ford a $38 boost and Chrysler a $99 jump — Basford for three days managed to dodge press, radio and TV and the obvious question: "How much makes a major increase?"

So they ambushed him as he came out of cabinet. They were there with their pads and pencils, their mikes and cameras, and he squirmed. He thought he had said something different in Vancouver. He explained, he rationalized, it and butted, and looked and sounded ridiculous in his awkward dodging.

If the writing press alone had been there, he could, as some cabinet members have sometimes, told the reporters to get lost.

But there were the mikes, and worse, the cameras, one on a swivel, the other a portable shoulder-shooter, and they followed him around like machine-guns as he tried to slip behind the crowd of tourists waiting for the prime minister.

"You are dodging," a TV reporter reprimanded him, "and deliberately avoiding giving a straight answer to a straight question." He tried some more ducking and weaving — but the question just wouldn't go away.

At that point, demoralized, panic overtook Basford and he broke and ran, shoulders defensively hunched like a fugitive.

across the green lawns of Parliament Hill.

The poor performers have made a couple of half-hearted attempts to solve their image problems by banning the cameras and mikes from the rotunda of the Commons, but the invocation of press freedom foiled them.

One fired-up MP solved his electronic press problem by punching out a cameraman. But George Hies really showed them how — if you don't want to answer, then don't, he counselled, and don't let them give you the business.

As good as his word, he has been seen and heard to tell a newsmen with a mike: "Get that damned thing out of my face before I break it over your head."

Green Beret Case

More Controversy Ahead

By RAYMOND HEARD from Washington

BY belatedly dropping the Green Beret murder case in the interests of "national security," the Nixon administration has exposed itself to ridicule in Congress and the press without managing to calm the controversy over "cloak and dagger" work by U.S. forces.

Yet if the administration has done nothing else, it has avoided a trial in the best legal brains in America, acting for the defence, were determined to question the whole moral basis for the unpopular war in Vietnam. There were strong indications that the defence would have been based on a Nuremberg precedent. This is that if the six elite Special Forces officers were indeed guilty, their superiors, here and in Saigon, were equally guilty of a war-crime that, in short, they were only "obeying orders."

Only the masters of the Communist propaganda apparatus, who now have new ammunition to use against the Central Intelligence Agency and the Green Berets, can be happy about the decision to free the six officers, who were charged with the Mafia-style killing of a Vietnamese "double-agent."

The "good guy" image of the Green Berets, whose praises have been sung by Tin Pan Alley and by Hollywood, has been tarnished beyond repair. And these counter-insurgency specialists are active not only in Southeast Asia, but also in Latin America.

The Nixon administration's reputation for improvising policy, for allowing different agencies (in this instance the CIA and the defence department) to take contradictory positions on the same issue, has been strengthened immeasurably.

Moreover, six professional soldiers, and their families, are now expected to spend the rest of their lives under a cloud of suspicion. The accused, in effect, have been denied the most elementary privilege of a citizen: a right to a fair trial.

This, in turn, exposes the most glaring inconsistency of the whole sorry episode: why did it take two months for the army to learn from the CIA that its agents would not testify at the courts-martial?

On the key matter of who ordered the killing, you pay your money and you take your choice, as the saying goes. The defence lawyers have charged that the CIA was to blame. The CIA director, Mr. Richard Helms, has told reporters that his men had no role whatever in the killing.

Although the CIA can claim almost total immunity from having to go before the courts, President Nixon could have ordered Mr. Helms to send his agents to explain their involvement, or non-involvement, in the murder. But Mr. Nixon, who must have been involved in the controversy despite White House assurances that it was none of his business, did not choose to instruct the CIA to testify. He thus sided with the CIA in the latest, and most sensational, instance of a feud with the military command.

Mr. Nixon may have avoided sensational courts-martial but he, the army, the Special Forces, the CIA and the whole intelligence apparatus in Southeast Asia, nonetheless stand in the dock of public opinion.

In Congress, powerful politicians have said they will do all they can to see that the records of the Green Berets are cleared. This foreshadows congressional inquiries into the actions and decisions of all agencies involved in the bizarre incident.

The unexpected decision not to give the Green Berets their day in court comes at an awkward time for the military intelligence community here. The Pueblo fiasco is still making waves because many people believe that Commander Lloyd Bucher, who gave up his spy-ship to the North Koreans, was the scapegoat for blunders committed by his fearless superiors.

In the eyes of those young Americans — and their dove patrons in Congress — who question the morality of the Vietnam war, the Green Beret controversy is a case study in everything that is wrong with the power-structure.

There is one factor which should not pass unnoticed as the uproar over the treatment of the six Special Forces officers mounts. It is this: even though the United States is involved in the longest and most divisive war in its history, the public still has access to information (scandal as it may be) that would never reach the press in any other nation.

Mayor Frank Ney and the B.C. Ferries

Nanaimo Daily Free Press

MAYOR FRANK NEY, Nanaimo's new member-elect in the B.C. Social Credit government, is to be commended on the stand he is taking to get an improved ferry service between Nanaimo and Horseshoe Bay. His opinion that the government ferry service could be greatly improved is receiving hearty support from many sources in Nanaimo.

With the change to the winter schedules, ferries in and out of Nanaimo and in and out of Horseshoe Bay have been running late. At the weekend in particular the lateness of arrival and departure of ferry vessels was particularly noticeable.

Motorists and tourists on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 28, were held up over two hours at Horseshoe Bay by delayed vessels. As many as four lanes of autos, trucks, trailers, etc.

were left in the lines on the Horseshoe Bay wharf. We hear this had been general for many days.

Mayor Ney says he is making some headway with government officials and his protests have reached the ears of Premier W. A. C. Bennett. It appears a full investigation is under way.

It is our opinion that the department at Victoria, possibly with the thought of reducing expenditures, had cut in the winter schedule far too early. It seems the authorities believe the tourist season is at an end and the service after August should be drastically curtailed.

September is still a vacation month in B.C. All over B.C. during the month of September and up to the present most highways are still well filled with tourists. Many of these are the older class of tourist travelling in trailers, campers and tents. From Jasper to Banff, from Radium Hot Springs to Osoyoos, spaces in government camps, those few still open to the tourists, have been full each night. The mode of tourist travel is changing. More and more people are touring on wheels with homes above them. On Sunday last on one delayed trip to Nanaimo there were many truck campers and trailers held up for two or more hours. Perhaps the powers that be should take a hard look at this change in the tourist trend. September is one of the best months of the year, even October, for holiday travel.

We say, more power to our newly elected member. We admire his courage, his tenacity and the time he is taking to bring to the proper authorities a problem which he and we think can be solved. To say, as has one government source, that new schedules are already printed and sailings cannot be altered because of this seems to be a weak excuse for a lagging service. Possibly while Mayor Ney is at it, he might go a bit farther and press for a late-night sailing out of Vancouver to accommodate Upper Island people. There is no doubt despite the fact he has not been sworn in as a member of the B.C. legislature, that Mayor Ney does not intend to shirk the responsibilities his new post has heaped upon him. We say good luck to our new member in his quest for improved travel service into this port. We hope the powers that be in Victoria listen closely to Mayor Ney's pleas.

Oil Exploration in Strait of Georgia

Comox District Free Press

MAN'S search for natural resources, has defaced a good part of this earth but this hunt will and must continue if we are to continue to prosper in this part of our highly mechanized world.

One must be taken from the ground, trees must be taken from our forests and oil must be taken from the ground. This must be done to benefit all of mankind. But when it benefits only a few and places hardship on a majority then these great resources must stay where they are.

The recent announcement that the government has given permission for an oil company to begin seismic exploratory work for gas and oil in Georgia Strait from Seaboard Island to Campbell River is a decision that has shocked every man, woman and child able to comprehend the possible consequences. It doesn't mean that we will see oil drilling rigs cropping up all up and down Vancouver Island's east coast. But if the exploratory work reveals oil sands of commercial richness, then this is a distinct possibility.

The fate of the pretty California city of Santa Barbara last year is enough to bring clouds of protest over any such drilling works in this area. An oil spill from an offshore drilling platform sent an oil slick up to 12 inches thick spewing over the sandy California beach.

Vancouver Island is known to the world over for its scenic beauty and one of its biggest industries is tourism. If a spill similar to the one off Santa Barbara were to happen in Georgia Strait it would wipe out the tourist industry on Vancouver Island. It staggers the imagination to think of our beautiful Gulf Islands soaked in thick, black oil and the bird life of these islands perishing by the thousands.

There is no way an oil company can guarantee such a disaster cannot happen here. But even if the worst did not happen, the beauty of Vancouver Island would not be enhanced by the sight of oil wells pumping along our beaches. Anyone who has been to Los Angeles knows what a dismal sight that can be.

It boils down to risking one industry (tourism) for another (oil) and more people get more enjoyment out of the natural beauty of Vancouver Island than will enjoy an oil bonanza. It is time we started thinking about the majority of the people in this country. There are plenty of untouched and relatively uninhabited areas in Canada where oil companies can explore for oil. Please leave this Vancouver Island for the people to enjoy.

North Koreans Leave U.S. No Easy Way Out

By DENIS WARNER, from Canberra

By day loudspeakers blare propaganda across the wastes of the demilitarized zone separating North and South Korea. By night there are repeated exchanges of fire as infiltrators from the North attempt to make their way through the lines.

Next to Vietnam, Korea exposes the United States to its greatest danger in Asia today. The Pueblo capture brought it perilously close to the brink of a new war, and the shooting down of the EC-121 reconnaissance plane provided the Nixon administration with one of its first, and most serious challenges. It is no secret that some senior members of the American government advised strong retaliatory action.

With American sentiment heavily against continued, or further, military involvement on the Asian mainland, any scheme for defusing the Korean situation and permitting a graceful American withdrawal could scarcely fail to command itself to Washington.

Prime Minister Kim Il-sung of North Korea has now come up with what appears, at first glance, to be such a scheme. In a long interview with a Finnish Communist Party delegation at the beginning of September, Kim spelled out his peace plan: the complete withdrawal of American forces from South Korea, followed by a pledge by North and South Korea not to invade each other and to reduce the size of their armed forces to no more than 100,000 men.

The next step is the reunification of North and South. This is to be brought about by the creation of a central unified government to be set up after "general elections" throughout North and South on a democratic basis without any interference of outside forces."

***

Since this, more or less, is what the United States hopes to achieve by its continuing presence in South Vietnam, Kim's seeming moderation, though not necessarily calculated to appeal to the South Koreans, would appear to merit some attention.

One day this is how the Americans will undoubtedly leave Korea — But not yet.

For in the same interview, Kim went on to say that peaceful reunification would not be achieved so long as "the present puppet regime" is allowed to remain in South Korea, and he promptly reiterated his plans for creating a war of national liberation.

"Through the active and arduous revolutionary struggle, the South Korean people will be all the more awakened and tempered and will grow into an invincible revolutionary force which will eventually be able to repulse any malignant enemy," he said. "And once a revolutionary situation arrives, they will definitely crush U.S. imperialism and its lackeys and achieve the final victory for the revolution."

When it comes to hostility and aggressiveness, the South does not lag behind the North. It also favors reunification on "democratic" terms. Given the slightest encouragement by the United States it would respond to every provocative act by the North with provocations of its own.

In this potentially dangerous situation, the United States has truly played the role of the peacemaker. Its restraints on the Southerners and go less on itself, have prevented incidents turning into war.

Remove the American presence, and the restraints that go with it, and the peninsula would erupt, especially if the Soviet Union, in its struggle with China, also withdrew its restraints on the North.

Whether this may not happen, anyway, is, and will remain, a cause for concern.

Nixon's Court Favorite Object of Power Play

By BOB CURRIE
From Washington

When the United States Supreme Court began its 180th year this week there was less interest in the man in the middle — the new chief justice — than in the big leather chair to his far left that remained vacant.

President Nixon's nominee to fill it is a once-obscure southern judge named Clement F. Haynsworth Jr.

Quiet and courtly, Haynsworth was been the centre of one of the most protracted and volatile battles ever over a Supreme Court appointment.

Although the debate probably will soon shift from the Senate Judiciary committee, where a slim majority apparently still favors Haynsworth, to the Senate floor itself, the eventual outcome remains anybody's guess.

The issue has taken on unusual significance because Nixon's determination to seat Haynsworth seems to lend support — despite Nixon's denials — to the theory he leans toward a so-called "southern strategy" in preparing for the 1972 elections.

In broad terms, such a strategy means abandoning attempts to woo the minority Negro vote — solidly Democratic last time — and writing off the generally "liberal" northeastern states. Instead, Republicans would consolidate their strength in the more conservative Midwest and seek to bring southern voters into the fold including arch right-wingers who voted for segregationist George C. Wallace's third-party ticket in 1968.

Haynsworth enjoys the firm support of the reactionary establishment of the South and the men who represent that constituency in Congress.

***

On the other hand, he is repugnant to Negroes and the labor community, who charge that his record as a circuit court judge shows him to be soft on segregation and hard on unions.

Other critics see him as indifferent to judicial propriety in sitting on cases involving unions and companies in which he had indirect financial interest.

Despite persistent rumors, Haynsworth and the White House have denied that the nomination will be withdrawn.

***

In another recent Supreme Court controversy, Judge Abe Fortas, nominated by then-president Johnson to be chief justice, finally had his nomination withdrawn in the face of criticism over business involvements.

Subsequently President Nixon's nominee, Warren E. Burger, became the 15th chief justice, taking his seat on the nine-man bench when the session opened, one man short, last Monday.

Nixon has said he considers the objections to Haynsworth insubstantial and he obviously is relying on the Senate to observe the traditional respect for the president's choice.

Even if it does, it will bring little comfort to those who fear the issue will further divide the Republican party, still in the minority in both houses of Congress.

The man who has Nixon's ear in this particular instance, it seems, is Attorney-General John Mitchell, Nixon's former New York law partner, the most right-wing member of the cabinet and the reputed architect of the "southern strategy."

and, late in 1927, hurled three bombs into the auto of former President Alvaro Obregon. Obregon survived, but the assassins were traced to a young Jesuit priest, Miguel Pro Juarez, who was suspected of secretly hearing confessions and giving communion. Padre Pro was put up against a wall and shot to death, adding one more name to the war's long list of victims.

In 1935, a new president, Lazaro Cardenas, decided it was time to relax the pressures on the church. He made no effort to amend the law; he simply eased up on its enforcement.

The one section of the law that continues to be enforced is that covering property ownership. Cathedrals and church buildings where services are conducted remain in the hands of the state, while other church properties are held by private corporations.

Except for an occasional, mild suggestion that the anti-church sections be expunged from the constitution, political activity apparently holds no attraction today for Mexico's priests. The unenforced law casts too long a shadow.

Archbishop Adalberto Almeda Y Merino of Chihuahua came as close to touching on politics as any Mexican priest has for a long time when he said here last week that the church "must denounce and condemn injustice or oppressive institutions, be they social, economic or political."

***

Officially, the attitude is clearly hands off. This was made clear recently by Jose Alvarez Icaza, director of a lay agency known as the national centre of social communication of the church in Mexico. Alvarez Icaza said the church will support no candidate in the forthcoming presidential election and will bring no pressure on the government to establish diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

Mexico's presidents, meanwhile, along with most of its other principal political figures, continue to regard the church as something best viewed from outside.

Even in death the tradition holds. When former president Adolfo Lopez Mateos died last month, his coffin was taken not to a church but to the senate chamber. There was no religious service. A eulogy was read out by a party leader.

Heath in Trouble Both Ways

By JOHN LEBLANC
From London

Conservative Leader Edward Heath, with his hold on the next British prime ministership slowly loosening, was looking over both shoulders Wednesday as the Tories' annual conference at Brighton got into full cry.

On the left, Prime Minister Wilson, virtually counted out for the next general election a few weeks ago, was charging up in the popularity polls.

Over the other shoulder to the far right was intellectual Enoch Powell, tossed out of Heath's "shadow" cabinet last year for a tough stand against colored immigration but now shaping up as a focus of anti-Heath sentiment in several fields.

Until earlier this year, Heath's party in the straw votes was being given an edge of as much as 23 per cent over Labor, which would have meant a shattering defeat for Wilson. More recently, the margin came down to about nine percent.

Wednesday, the Conservative Evening Standard reported that a poll taken for it by the Opinion Research Centre shows the Conservatives leading Labor by only four per cent—48 to 42.

"The outcome of the battle for power to rule Britain in the 1970s now is wide open again," the newspaper said. Coincidentally, The Daily Telegraph—also Conservative—reported the result of a Gallup Poll suggesting 48 per cent of the electorate think Heath is not a good leader while 29 per cent do.

The same poll shows 43 per cent satisfied with Wilson, his best rating in two years.

Heath's aspirations to power have been damped recently by such developments as an apparent sharp improvement in Britain's economic position—leading to hopes of a relaxing of austerity measures next year—and a superb public relations performance by Wilson at last week's Labor party conference in Brighton.

In addition, Enoch Powell has been more abrasive than usual lately.

Powell, MP Midlands riding and former Conservative health minister, has just come out with a demand that Britain withdraw its application to enter the European Common Market, running counter to Tory policy.

Powell's stand on the market issue is particularly disconcerting to Heath at the moment since Heath has been trying to rally the party in continued support of the Common Market move despite rebuffs from the Continent and polls showing that of late most Britons seem against it.

A further embarrassment came just before the Brighton conference when a group of Midlands businessmen publicly offered to put up £10,000 ($26,000) to finance a move by Powell to take over the party leadership. Other prospective donors ran the amount up to about £40,000.

Powell, who promptly turned them down, is being referred to now as a great dissenter in the party-splitting style of Joseph Chamberlain among the Tories or Aneurin Bevan in the Labor group.

Revolutionary Spirit Dies Hard in Mexico

State, Church Daren't Mix

By FRANCIS B. KENT, from Mexico

The appearance of Mexico's president at religious services of any kind would shock the nation. When the daughter of President Ordaz was married recently, scores of friends and relatives crowded the church for the ceremony. The president, however, was conspicuously absent.

The incident points up sharply the strict separation of church and state in this overwhelmingly Catholic nation, where churches are almost as numerous as saloons and the crucifix is a household fixture.

Nonetheless, the church probably faces more restrictions here than it does anywhere else on this side of the Iron Curtain. By law it cannot own land or operate schools. The state is empowered to decide the number of clergymen in an area. Priests are forbidden to appear in public wearing clerical garb.

It has not always been this way. The religion of Rome came to this part of the world, via Spain, almost four and a half centuries ago, soon after the arrival of Hernando Cortez and his Conquistadores. It found a ready convert in the primitive Indian, to whom the confessional, the penance and the tithes were not unfamiliar.

The church grew and prospered, soon owned half the land in the country and mortgages on most of what it did not own. It controlled education and stood aloof from the civil courts. It assumed an important role in the colonial administration. On occasion, a bishop even exercised the role of viceroy. And in the end the church's success proved to be its undoing.

In 1917, following the revolution of Francisco Madero, Pancho Villa and Emiliano Zapata, Mexico made a serious frontal assault on the church. It stripped the church of its properties, prohibited monastic orders and outlawed church-operated schools. The Mexican episcopate ordered priests to abandon their churches. A bloody, three-year war exploded.

Organized "Christians," shouting "Long live Christ the king," sacked schools, dynamited trains and public buildings

In Tory Nova Scotia Socialistic Ventures Pay Dividends

By VINCENT EGAN
From Halifax

Political tags can be highly misleading to outsiders. Sweden, as everybody knows, has had a socialist government for more than a generation—but it is notably short of state-owned enterprises and long on free-wheeling (and slipping) private firms.

Nova Scotia, as is equally well known, has a staunchly Tory government—but it has gone more deeply into ownership and operation of commercial undertakings than has any socialist regime in Canada.

On the whole, the Nova Scotia government's ventures into the private sector appear to have been successful. Its record shows one rather sticky mess—the Deuterium of Canada Ltd. heavy-water plant at Glace Bay—and a couple of near-misses.

But its successes, if less well publicized, have paid dividends in human as well as financial terms.

Industrial Estates Ltd., the Crown corporation through which the provincial government invests in business, has signed contracts with 61 companies during the 10 years it has been in existence. Of these, 59 are in production and two are under construction.

The companies that IEL has helped to sponsor have provided 4,200 new jobs in new or expanded plants in Nova Scotia, and another 1,300 are to be created in the two plants that France's Michelin Tire Corp. is building.

Premier G. I. Smith, applying a rule-of-thumb that six new jobs are created indirectly (such as in service industries) for each new job in manufacturing, declared that IEL will have created more than 11,000 new jobs for Nova Scotians when the Michelin projects are in operation.

On the other side of the coin, the provincial government's venture into the primary steel mill at Sydney prevented the direct loss of more than 3,000 jobs—and the indirect loss of thousands more—when the proposed closing of the Dominion Steel and Coal Co. operation was announced by the British-controlled Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. two years ago.

At Port Tupper, where $300,000,000 has already been committed to industrial development at the deepest and largest harbor on the Atlantic seaboard, Gulf Canada is building a $65,000,000 oil refinery, Canadian General Electric a $55,000,000 heavy-water plant, and Nova Scotia Pulp a $60,000,000 expansion.

The province's export trade is strong. Value of exports clearing Nova Scotia ports last year was $482,000,000, up 83.5 per cent from $262,800,000 in 1967. The increase for exports made in Nova Scotia was 30 per cent, and Premier Smith predicts a further 40 per cent gain in 1969.

Scientist's Theory of Glassy Pellets Found in Moon's Dust

Solar Explosion Caused Moon 'Marbles'?

LONDON (AP) — Close scrutiny of photographs taken on the moon by the Apollo 11 astronauts suggests that a gigantic flare-up on the sun glazed the moon's surface and created many of the glassy pellets discovered in the moon's dust.

The solar outburst must have occurred not more than 100,000 years ago and probably lasted for only 10 to 100 seconds. But because the sun's radiation increased 100-fold during it, the "explosion" was powerful enough partly to melt the surface of the moon, 23,000,000 miles away.

This novel explanation of how the moon got its glassy skin was announced by Dr. Thomas Gold, director of the Centre for Radiophysics and Space Research, Cornell University, and leader of the Apollo 11 project for taking close-up, fine detail, colour pictures of the moon's surface with a stereoscopic camera.

His theory is based on exhaustive studies of the 17 stereoscopic pictures that Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin took with the camera, which

Dr. Gold says are of excellent quality.

Writing in the current issue of the Journal of Science, Dr. Gold says that the pictures clearly show glassy patches ranging in size from a half millimetre to one centimetre.

"The glazed areas are clearly concentrated towards the top surfaces of protruberances, although they exist also on some sides. Points and edges appear to be strongly favoured for the glazing process. In some cases, droplets appear to have run down an inclined surface for a few millimetres and congealed there."

All this strongly suggests that the rocks were melted by a distant source of intense heat, Dr. Gold writes.

So does the fact that when Armstrong and Aldrin described the exact locations of the glassy patches seen in the photographs, they invariably said they were in the middle of little craters in the two to four-foot range. The crater walls would have focused the heat towards the centre like a bowl-shaped mirror.

If the source of this heat was the sun, Dr. Gold calculates that it must have flared up to 100 times its present intensity to cause the degree of melting observed. The apparently thin coating of glaze indicates that this tremendous solar blast must have lasted only a short time.

Dating this spectacular event is less easy. Dr. Gold writes that it must have occurred sufficiently recently for the smooth glaze not to have been destroyed by micrometeorites hitting it, nor for it to have become covered by the slow shifts of lunar soil.

From present estimates of the frequency of micrometeorites on the moon, Dr. Gold puts the date at between 30,000 and 100,000 years ago—well within the period of homo sapiens.

However, though it melted the moon, our ancestors would hardly have been affected by the flash, Dr. Gold points out. The moon was particularly affected because it has no atmosphere, but on earth the heat from the flash would have been spread out before it hit the lower atmosphere on the ground. The temperature rise on the ground was probably only a thousandth as much as that on the moon.

Nevertheless, Dr. Gold speculates, it may be possible to find evidence of the flash in the earth's rocks. Also, it is likely that the upper atmospheres of the earth and Venus and the entire atmosphere of Mars would have been seriously affected.

In presenting his Solar flare theory, Dr. Gold discounts several other ideas of how the glassy patches and pellets originated, among them the notion that they were formed by the rocket exhaust of the Apollo 11 landing vehicle, by melting due to the impact of meteoroids that formed the little craters where they are found, or by heat radiated from much larger impact meteoroids elsewhere on the moon.

Empress Site In 1970

VANCOUVER — The 1970 convention of the B.C. School Trustees' Association will be held in Victoria at the Empress Hotel.

The official invitation was extended Wednesday by Dr. Warren Jameson, chairman of the Greater Victoria school board. Nearly 200 trustees, school officials and guests attended this year's convention at the Bayshore Inn.

Head Trustee After Re-election:

Student Unrest Homemade

By BILL STAVDAL
VANCOUVER (Special) — Student unrest in the schools is an expression of a general public discontent with education, James Campbell said Wednesday as he was elected to a second term as president of the B.C. School Trustees Association.

Mr. Campbell, a member of the Gulf Islands school board, defeated Peter Powell of North Vancouver to retain the presidency.

In an interview following his re-election, Mr. Campbell said his prime concern was still the involvement of laymen in educational decision-making.

During the past year he has advocated the creation of a citizens' advisory group to help make educational policies for B.C. Such a body was advocated by the 1960 Chant Royal Commission report on education, but never implemented.

"The big obstacle is that the power to make changes is in the hands of the Establishment," Mr. Campbell said Wednesday. "Kids don't create the kind of disturbance they do these days unless they are brought up believing that things aren't as they should be."

"The dissent is an expression in many cases, of a clear dissatisfaction by parents who see faults in the school system and discuss them around the dinner table."

All the major tasks he will tackle in the coming year, said the president, trace back to his top priority: "The increased involvement of the public in education."

Turning to the issue of negotiations with teachers over annual salary contracts, Mr. Campbell said a form of regional bargaining was evolving from the manoeuvres of both sides.

Trustees have been seeking zonal or even province-wide bargaining for years, to replace bargaining by each school board with its teachers.

The B.C. Teachers Federation has opposed any change, and the government hasn't acted to change the system.

EASIER GAINS

"There is a defacto regional bargaining system evolving," said Mr. Campbell.

"However, as long as it is easy for teachers to make gains by keeping boards separated, then they will continue to make gains."

Mr. Campbell said he supported B.C.'s new education finance formula, with the exception of its provision for referendums on operating funds above a fixed limit.

Mr. Powell was re-elected to the vice-presidency, the post he has held for a year.

Research Grant Reduced

VANCOUVER — School trustees Wednesday rejected a move to end their financial contribution to the Education Research Institute of B.C., but cut a proposed grant of $100,000 to about $20,000.

The budget reduction was made at the close of the 65th annual convention of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

It rejected the invitation of trustee trustees who complained that so far the BCSTA has not only been the originator of the research institute, but also its main financial support.

The trustees have previously made two $100,000 unconditional grants to the ERIBC. A year ago they offered up to $100,000 in matching grants for any money contributed from other sources.

Conrad Lamond, executive director of the institute, announced his resignation during the convention following failure of a fund-raising drive.

The institute thus got only about $20,000 from the BCSTA for 1969.

On Wednesday the trustees first rejected a resolution to eliminate an unconditional grant of $100,000 for 1970. Then they voted to unconditionally grant the remainder of last year's $100,000 allocation to the research group — about $80,000.

The decision was made despite the complaint of trustee Dr. J. B. Wilson of North Vancouver that the BCSTA has "no effective control" over the research institute.

During the convention, Jim Killean, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, announced that the BCTF will give $22,000 to the institute in the coming year.

Craft There Two Years

Next Men on Moon Seek Predecessor

Colonial Los Angeles Times Service
PASADENA, Calif. — When the Apollo 12 astronauts land on the moon Nov. 18, one of their primary interests will be a small tripod space-craft — Surveyor 3 — that beat them to the Ocean of Storms by more than 2½ years.

And if the lunar module crewmen, Charles (Pete) Conrad and Alan Bean, can land close enough to Surveyor they will not only study the craft but bring part of it back to Earth for analysis.

Currently it is estimated that if they can land within 1,200 to 1,500 feet of Surveyor they can walk to the spacecraft, the first to scratch furrows in the moon's face.

But not only must the landing be close enough to Surveyor; the terrain between the two vehicles also must be negotiable.

PAVED WAY

Launched as one of a series of remote-controlled spacecraft to pave the way for manned landings, Surveyor 3 touched down on the moon April 19, 1967.

During the ensuing lunar day (13 earth days) its unique surface sampler — a steel-tipped claw at the end of a five-foot flexible arm — dug, picked, scraped and trenched the lunar surface.

Meanwhile, Surveyor's television system returned 6,315 pictures of the sampler's work and the surrounding terrain.

After meeting all its objectives and giving scientists new information on the nature of moon soil, Surveyor failed to survive the minus 250 degree cold of the two-week night.

Introducing the VW Diagnosis System.

Volkswagen's biggest improvement in 17 years.

Now when you buy a 1970 Volkswagen, you get a series of free check-ups.

Using advanced electronic equipment, we examine just about everything that can affect your VW's health.

Engine. Electrical system. Wheel alignment. The works.

An expert diagnostician goes over your VW from bumper to bumper.

His sensitive electronic gear can actually diagnose problems the human eye can't see and the human ear can't hear. (Before they become problems the human eye can see and the human ear can hear.)

An oscilloscope traces the blip, blip, of the VW's ignition.

A special instrument traces out a graph of the compression of each cylinder.

Something like giving your whole car an X-ray.

(Of course, if you already own a Volkswagen, you're not left out. The new VW Diagnosis and Maintenance System works for any VW ever made.)

Volkswagen Diagnosis. It's a whole new way of life.

With close to 300 VW dealers across Canada there has to be one close to you.

Analysts Betting on Lower Rates

This is the open season for hunters, and also for security and money market analysts, to pop off their ammunition. Twenty of the latter in the United States have been spreading their views as to what is going to happen to interest rates in the next six months.

The consensus is there will be a steady drop toward the end of 1969, and a further and faster fall in the first quarter of 1970. Here are some of their guesses in percentage figures, with the first figure referring to now, second to Dec. 31, and third to March 31:

U.S. 91-day treasury bills — 7.00, 6.50, 6.15; U.S. one-year bills — 7.30, 7.00, 6.35; U.S. seven-year bills — 7.35, 7.15, 6.70; High-Grade tax-exempt bonds — 6.15, 6.00, 5.65; Utilities — 8.25, 7.50, 7.35; Three-month Euro-Dollars — 11.00, 10.00, 8.50; Prime bank loans — 8.50, 8.25, 7.50; Discount rates — 6.00, 6.00, 5.75.

These figures indicate a general drop of about 1/4 per cent in rates during the next three months, and a drop of 1 per cent, or even more, over the six-month period.

It is pointed out such estimates are based on the belief the current tight money situation, coupled with the high interest rates, will be successful in combating the inflationary pace of the economy.

The property is shared 40 per cent by the Dynamic group of which New Continental is part, 40 per cent by Petrobec of Montreal and 20 per cent by Citizens Pipeline of Calgary.

U.S. Flights Germans Reduce Fares

COLOGNE (Reuters) — The West German airline Lufthansa said Wednesday it is introducing drastically-cut group fares on regular flights to the United States.

The new tariffs, effective this week, offer clubs and organized groups round trips from Frankfurt to New York for as little as 600 marks (about $160) a person. Depending on the season and the size of the group the cost would be a maximum of 900 marks (about $240).

Lufthansa said the cuts have been approved by the West German transport ministry and U.S. supervisory authorities. The move followed notification by Alitalia airlines of drastic reductions on Rome-to-New York air fares.

Corporate Service Sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee Wednesday killed President Nixon's plan to abolish the post office department in favor of a corporate mail service. It was a major setback for the administration, but Nixon's plan could be revived on the House floor or in the Senate.

On a 13-13 vote, the 25-member post office committee deadlocked on a motion by Rep. Morris Udall, (D-Ariz.) to proceed with drafting a bill along the lines proposed by Nixon, who wants to replace the post office department with a government-chartered, nonprofit corporation.

Since the votes were close, the committee was free to go ahead and draw up a bill sought by chairman Thaddeus Dulski, (D-N.Y.) who has called for a simple reorganization of the existing department rather than remove it from the cabinet and turn it over to a board of directors as proposed by Nixon.

The White House expressed "some disappointment" over the defeat but press secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon would continue to seek creation of a postal corporation to deliver the mails, one of the pet projects of his administration.

Udall conceded that defeat was "a major setback," but said "the corporate concept is not dead by any means."

Bank Borrowing Rate Increased by France

PARIS (UPI) — The French government Wednesday increased the bank borrowing rate 1 per cent to combat inflation.

In increasing the rate to 8 per cent, an alltime high for France, the government moved to support the franc, whose value was out by 12.5 per cent last Aug. 8.

The increase will make it more difficult for business banks to borrow money from the Bank of France because they will have to pay higher interest on such loans.

In turn, customers of business banks will feel the money squeeze, since their interest rate on loans will rise from 9.20 to 10.20 per cent to offset the cost of dealing with the Bank of France.

Inflation has caused Frenchmen to become apprehensive about the stability of the franc at its current level.

Frenchmen fear a new wave of price increases. Accordingly, they are spending their earnings on durable goods at present prices instead of depositing money in the bank, as demanded by the government.

This buying spree is putting more money into circulation and damaging the government's effort to contain inflation.

President Georges Pompidou said at Wednesday's cabinet meeting that the franc was in good condition and its stability was beyond questioning.

"The franc is not threatened, it will not be even challenged," Pompidou told the cabinet.

At 8 per cent, the French bank rate will be equal to the Bank of England's crisis rate and second highest in Europe. Denmark recently had to raise its rate to 9 per cent because of a heavy outflow of its reserves earlier this year.

Sodden Tunisia Asks Aid

TUNIS (AP) — Desperate after 10 days of rain described as the worst in the country's history, the Tunisian government pleaded to the world Wednesday for help.

More than 500 persons were reported killed as masses of mud swept away trees, bridges, flocks of sheep, highways, rail lines and even entire villages.

Following five years of drought, Tunisia has had the equivalent of 10 years' rainfall in 10 days. Half the country was under mud and water and 50,000 homes were reported destroyed.

The government asked all foreign diplomatic missions in the capital for helicopters, prefabricated bridges, sandbags and corrugated iron.

Witnesses said rescue workers could get to many survivors only by parachute or on mule back.

Water was rationed and the danger of epidemics loomed.

A United States Air Force plane which circled part of the area Tuesday reported vast areas of chocolate-colored mud surrounding towns.

Technicians said the country's phosphate industry, which normally brings in $5,000,000 a week and is the backbone of the Tunisian economy, might be out of business for three to five years.

Damage to railways, highways, bridges, communications facilities and agriculture was estimated at up to $30,000,000.

Radar Affected

MiG Slip Blamed On Budget Chops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Budget cuts that grounded some radar patrol flights allowed a Cuban defector to fly his MIG 17 into the United States unchallenged by U.S. air defenses, it was learned Wednesday.

On the House floor, Rep. Paul Rogers (D-Fla.) said the dash to freedom by Lieut. Eduardo Guerra Jimenez Sunday showed Fidel Castro his planes can enter the United States "practically at will"—and even fly over President Nixon's winter home.

PATROL FLIGHTS

It was understood that because of the flight, the radar patrol flights off Florida were being stepped up again. The Pentagon had no official comment.

The Cuban avoided radar detection for most of his flight by keeping the Soviet-built jet fighter just 30 to 40 feet above the ocean.

Because radar beams travel in a straight line and do not bend with the curvature of the earth, ground-based radar cannot "see" low-flying planes.

In the past, three EC-121 air force planes, which can aim their radar downward and get far greater coverage, have flown around-the-clock radar surveillance of the approaches to Florida to protect against surprise by low-flying planes.

But at the Pentagon, sources said the radar patrol off Florida was cut to one plane after defence Secretary Melvin Laird announced a $3 billion defence cutback Aug. 21.

LOVE PLANE

That lone plane was not in the air Sunday when the Cuban pilot came along.

Col. Richard Naldrett, commanding officer of the 966th airborne early warning and control squadron at McCoy base, Fla., confirmed this, but said "any gaps as a result of maintenance or any other reason, I would be precluded from commenting about."

The railway between the phosphate mines at Gafsa and the airport of Sfax was almost totally destroyed, cutting off some 15,000 to 20,000 miners from the rest of the country.

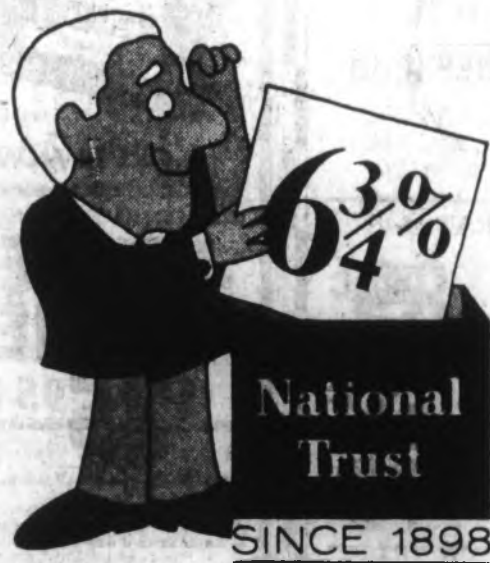

In the centre of the country, wadis—river beds—swelled and poured thousands of tons of mud into the city of Kairouan, covering the streets with up to two feet of slime.

In one place, a torrent of water followed a railway line and eventually gouged out a new wadi.

Obstruction to Peace?

Canadian Attitude Scored by Biafra

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — An official from Biafra charged Wednesday that Canada's attitude is an obstruction to peace talks aimed at ending the Nigerian civil war.

Dr. Ifegwu Eke, Biafran education minister, also said in a press conference and later interview that the United States is hoping that Biafrans "will be starved into submission" and is asking church groups to stop night flights into Biafra.

Asked whether he thinks the same thing is happening in Canada, he replied "I'm not certain." Asked whether this "may" be happening in Canada, he said "Yes."

ONLY AT NIGHT

At present only night flights, supported by various church groups are reaching Biafra. The Red Cross suspended daylight flights after one of its craft was shot down by a Nigerian Air Force plane.

Biafra has rejected a Nigeria-Red Cross agreement that would allow Red Cross daylight flights to start again. Eke said Biafra is demanding that certain clauses relating to Biafran security be deleted. He said hunger still is a serious problem in Biafra and called for more flights.

LIKE QUEBEC

Eke compared Canada's "peculiar" attitude on the civil war with the federal government's attitude toward Quebec. He said the Canadian government feels that if it supports the breaking away of a region it would be supporting a separate Quebec. The minister rejected this attitude, saying that Quebec is too advanced and sophisticated to be compared with Biafra.

Eke charged that Britain and the U.S. had used pressure against Canada to keep her from inserting the Biafran question into the UN. Britain had used Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith of Canada to bring pressure on Prime Minister Trudeau.

AT ALL COSTS

He said the U.S. and Canada are partially responsible for the lack of peace talks because of their support of the Nigerian federal government and blamed Britain and the Soviet Union for saying there must be one Nigeria "at all costs." This refers to the Nigerian demand that any peace settlement must leave

Nigeria and Biafra as one country.

But Eke took an important step toward meeting the Nigerian demand. He said that Biafra will not insist as it has in the past on maintaining the sovereignty of the breakaway region.

ONE CONDITION

Biafra was willing to meet Nigeria at any time "to sort things out" with the only precondition being that there must be no fighting during the talks. If Nigeria could present a plan under which the safety of the Iboes, predominant tribe of Biafra, was guaranteed inside and outside the region "we would take it."

Asked how Canada could affect peace talks, he said Canada has the respect of most African countries and influence with other countries. The fact that she was both French- and English-speaking gave her contacts with about 80 per cent of the countries of Africa.

If she took a neutral stand she could use her prestige to help bring about talks. The implication was that Canada should not take sides.

Tories Would Restore U.K. Military Presence

BRIGHTON, England — The Conservative party Wednesday affirmed its determination to restore Britain's military and naval presence in the South Atlantic and east of Suez if it wins the next general election.

Delegates to the annual party convention also voted to rebuild the home army and civil defence forces, both sharply curtailed by the Labor government for economy reasons.

The party rank-and-file enthusiastically cheered Geoffrey Rippon, Conservative spokesman on defence matters, when he said a Tory government would reverse the Labor government's policy of withdrawal from the Far East, the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf, and would provide the necessary naval strength and air support for British bases there.

This last pre-election conference was, however, apprehensive that the victory the Tories were preparing to celebrate in advance might not be won.

A national opinion poll, dropped like a bomb on the 4,000 delegates on opening day, reported that the enormous Tory popularity of seven months ago — 25 per cent lead over Labor — had plummeted to 4 per cent, the lowest since the Labor government devalued the pound two years ago and incurred the wrath of the voters with tight economic austerities.

The poll also found Tory leader Edward Heath's standing with the electorate still falling. Now only 27 per cent think he would make a good prime minister. Prime Minister Harold Wilson's standing continued to rise, however, to 50 per cent who says he does a good job. A Gallup Poll Tuesday gave similar results.

The Tories had expected to lose more ground after the successful Labor party meeting here last week, especially since Labor's improvement at the polls had begun before the economic upswing was registered last month.

Victoria Trains Growing

Victoria's E & N Railway yards will be used more now that up-island forest companies will be barging cars of newsprint and other paper products from here to Seattle. Companies used to barge materials to Vancouver and send them by rail to the U.S. through the Sumas gateway. This 40-car train, leaving here with four locomotive units, contained 15 empty cars being sent back to companies, and was one of longest trains ever moved from Victoria.

Quebec Draws Ottawa's Anger

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA (Special) — The federal government has accused the Quebec provincial administration of "disrespect to national unity."

The sore point at issue between Ottawa and Quebec City is the provincial government's failure to consult before inviting French Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Jean Kéfauver to pay a Canadian visit.

Lipkowski arrives today for a week in Quebec — and all Ottawa knows about it is what it hears from the Canadian Embassy in Paris and more immediately what it reads about it in the newspapers.

BY SPOKESMAN

The federal government made its concerned irritation known late Wednesday through an official spokesman of the external affairs department.

In ignoring Ottawa, says external's spokesman, Quebec City not only has hurt national unity but damaged relations between Canada and France.

To underline the feelings in Ottawa, external affairs has informed the French government that in not assigning Lipkowski to come to the national as well as the Quebec provincial capital, Paris must accept the "responsibility" for any hostility that might result in English Canada.

TWO YEARS

Since former president de Gaulle shouted his "Vive Québec Libre" from the balcony of Montreal City Hall on his visit to Expo two years ago, it has seemed like one incident after another in Paris-Ottawa relations.

There was the exclusion of Ottawa from an invitation to Quebec to a French educational conference in Gabon.

There was the quiet visit of the French senior civil servant Philippe Rouillon — Prime Minister Trudeau in anger called him an "undercover agent" — to French-Canadian communities in Manitoba.

"STATE VISIT"

There was the "state visit" to Paris of Quebec Educational Minister Jean Guy Cardinal.

And now, as the external affairs spokesman phrased it, "this."

The federal government, he said, no longer could "go on turning the other cheek indefinitely."

The "strategy of silence" in the face of provocation "has become useless," and Ottawa's long-suffering position "clearly untenable."

As soon as Ottawa got wind of Quebec City's invitation to Lipkowski, he had been requested "verbally" to include the national capital in his Canadian itinerary.

THE OVERTURES

This "verbal" invitation had been followed up with a personal one by the Canadian ambassador in Paris, "face to face" with the chief of the "North American desk" of the French foreign service in Paris. Lipkowski's response to Ottawa's overtures was described as "indifferent."

Since then there has been only Ottawa's wounded "silence," as in external affairs reports were read coming out of Paris and London that the federal government was so angry it was thinking of breaking diplomatic relations with France.

Equally inflammatory reports, said the external affairs spokesman, kept coming out of Quebec City.

Ottawa had shown "all the courtesies" to both Quebec City and Paris, and had been repaid in the currency of diplomatic discourtesy by both capitals.

Was it "a calculated insult" to which Ottawa had been subjected, the external spokesman was asked.

DIFFICULT JOB

"Difficult to define," he replied.

It was, he suggested, after thought, "unfortunate."

While obviously raging, external affairs, he insisted, from the beginning had regarded Lipkowski as a "junior" in the French foreign office.

And so, said the external affairs spokesman keeping a straight face, Ottawa was giving the whole unhappy affair "a strictly low-key treatment."

NOT FIRST TIME

Wounded feelings there certainly were — and not for the first time by any means — but the hurt did not go so deep that diplomatic relations were in danger.

But the reprimand was clear — and French-Canadian representatives of Quebec newspapers insisted that never had Ottawa talked so tough to Quebec City — there had been a provincial "disrespect to national unity," and the playboy from English Canada was not expected to be pleasant.

First Step in Ottawa

Council Goal: Aid to Lepers

OTTAWA (CP) — A Newfoundland social worker who chained himself to a bed in Ceylon earlier this year to focus attention on the plight of lepers, watched proudly Wednesday as the Canadian Leprosy Council was born.

Walter Davis, father of five, who remained chained to the bed for eight days, said at the time that "I want the world to know that leprosy can be cured and the victims rehabilitated."

He said Wednesday "it was just wonderful" to see the new council launched with a speech by Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, who resigned as Archbishop of Montreal two years ago to work among lepers in Africa.

The money spent on television advertising in Canada in one night would feed the unprivileged of Africa for one year, Cardinal Leger told the organizational meeting of the new council.

Maurice Strong, president of the Canadian International Development Agency, said Canada should undertake the eradication of leprosy in the world.

An estimated 10,000,000 people suffer from the disease, one of the oldest known to man.

The new organization is supported by such organizations as the Canadian Catholic Conference and the Canadian Council of Churches. Prominent churchmen from all denominations attended the first meeting.

Horsman Will Head Policemen's Union

Constable Kenneth Horsman, previously secretary of the Victoria Policemen's Union, was elected its president at a meeting Tuesday. Sgt. Lorne Shandley, who had been president for 13 years, resigned from his union position but will continue to serve on the police force.

Bomber Defence Favored By New Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The new chief of Canada's defence staff views with favor to idea of Canadian participation in a proposed new bomber defence system for North America.

Gen. Frederick Sharp made clear in an interview Wednesday that he was speaking from a military viewpoint. He also noted that the sophisticated new program is still under development in the United States and he would want to "look at the issue."

But on the assumption the plan works, that the Soviet bomber threat persists and that the Canadian and U.S. governments "want to do something about it," he would recommend Canadian participation.

ROMAN POINT

The system would be based on airborne warning and control, as opposed to the ground-based control machinery now used in the North American Air Defence Command. It would also employ over-the-horizon radars and advanced interceptors.

The Bomarc ground-to-air missiles now employed in continental defence would be scrapped.

Former U.S. defence secretary Robert McNamara last year estimated the cost of the new system at $12,500,000,000 to $13,700,000,000 over 10 years, depending on the type of interceptor selected to replace the present Voodoo.

Gen. Sharp said that over the long run, because of lower maintenance costs the new system would be cheaper than the present system.

LAST MONTH

Gen. Sharp, 53, who was deputy commander-in-chief of NORAD before succeeding Gen. Jean Allard in Canada's top defence post last month, said the effectiveness of the present bomber defence system is "going down."

He attributed this to improvements the Soviets have made in their long-range bombers, enabling them to fly at lower levels than previously and hence to neutralize present radar screens, and to confound defences through various electronic counter-measures.

The Bomarc can also "stand off" from their targets and launch air-to-ground missiles for distances of 40 to 500 miles.

He believed the most effective way to deal with the dangers thus posed is through the proposed new system.

Gen. Sharp, a native of Moose, Sask., said he fully supports the policy of forming predominantly French-speaking units, begun by his predecessor, Gen. Allard.

"We have plans to consolidate and expand this program," he said.

At present a combat group at Valcartier, Que., a destroyer-cruiser at Halifax and a CF-5 aircraft squadron at Bagotville, Que., are manned in the ratio of 80 per cent French-speaking.

Sharp

and 20-per-cent English-speaking personnel.

Gen. Sharp said the military must be able to draw recruits from Canadian society as a whole, "not just two-thirds of it."

It was not fair to give a French-speaking recruit a "quickie" course in English, then expect him to pass a technical course given in that language.

Besides, it was bad economics. In the past, some had failed because of the language barrier, and hence failed to achieve what they were capable of achieving.

Liberals Hoping For Big Things

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberals are hoping next month's party conference at Harrison Hot Springs, B.C., will send thought waves into all the local riding associations across Canada.

The idea of the conference, says Senator Richard Stanbury, president of the Liberal Federation of Canada, is to involve "the greatest number of Canadians possible" in the policy-forming process.

While the Harrison meeting will be attended by some 350 delegates, the three-day conference is considered the first step in a three-phase program that will involve many more Liberals.

The policy seminars at Harrison will be followed over the next year by similar seminars at the constituency, district and regional levels and delegates from these areas will then return to a national conference in the fall of 1970, presumably with a consensus.

Senator Stanbury told a news conference Wednesday that next year's national conference of 2,600 delegates will "establish the principles and objectives of liberalism and Liberal action for the 1970s."

Provincial federations will send 264 delegates to Harrison—the same number as there are MPs in the Commons—and 50 Liberal MPs will be delegated by the federal caucus. There will be another 50 members of the study forces are outside the party, including academics and businessmen.

Services Seek Safer Centre

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. armed services will remove their local draft processing, induction and recruiting operations to the safety of Brooklyn's Fort Hamilton as a result of the bombing of a Manhattan induction centre, it was announced Wednesday.

An explosion wrecked the fifth floor of the Whitehall Street induction centre shortly before midnight Tuesday and left it looking "like it had been damaged in the Second World War," according to Fred Goldberg, the centre's press spokesman. The floor was sealed off while more than 100 investigators, including FBI agents, examined the area.

The 52-year-old Whitehall centre, which processes about 250 men a day, has long been considered antiquated and unsuitable, army sources said. The army was reported to have been looking for another site for some time.

Japan Purchases Canadian Wheat

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japan has purchased 3,318,221 bushels of wheat at her weekly international tender, the Japanese Food Agency said Wednesday. The purchase included 2,302,631 bushels of Canadian wheat and 1,015,590 bushels of United States wheat for December shipment and for food use.

The import prices were $1.85 in U.S. dollars a bushel for the Canadian Manitoba No. 2 wheat, $1.68 for U.S. western white wheat and $2.04 for U.S. durum wheat.

Hijackings Recall Death of Guevara

From UPI

Hijackers seized two South American jet airliners in flight Wednesday, forcing them to fly to Cuba in apparent commemoration of the second anniversary of the death of Cuba's revolutionary Ernesto "Che" Guevara.

Airline officials said a total of 117 persons were aboard the two aircraft. Fifty were on a Brazilian Cruzeiro do Sul Caravelle hijacked on a domestic flight, and 67 were aboard an Argentine airlines Boeing 707 seized while landing at Santiago, Chile.

The two airline hijackings capture and death of Guevara in Bolivia in October, 1967. In a series of terrorist incidents in South America Wednesday, all group raided a small town near the capital of Montevideo, captured its police station and robbed its four banks of approximately $400,000. Follow-up said three of the raiders were killed in gun battles.

Police Academy Funds

Provincial Cut For Training Angers Mayor

Withdrawal of provincial government support from the Vancouver police training academy has cost the Victoria police commission $2,260, and Mayor Hugh Stephen called it "outrageous."

Police Chief J. F. Gregory told members of the commission Wednesday that the attorney-general's department not only stopped financial backing in the latter part of the fiscal year but made the action retroactive to Jan. 1, 1969.

That meant that the 1969 cost of training Victoria recruits, which normally would be borne by the academy, would have to be paid for by the city.

This year there have been 226 recruit training days at $10 a day.

Mayor Stephen, the commission chairman, was angry.

"To me it's outrageous not only that the support is withdrawn, but that it is made retroactive to January," he said.

Chief Gregory said he wrote to the attorney-general's department and was told, in reply, that the annual provincial per capita grant to municipalities had been increased this year and that part of the increase was to be devoted to police training.

This further irritated the mayor.

The per capita grant was never meant for any such thing. The government has a habit of doing this. It makes an increase in grants and then ties a number of strings on them, all of which further increase the load on municipalities.

"It's unfair, but there doesn't seem to be much we can do about it," said Mayor Stephen.

The $2,260 will be paid out of the budget contingency fund.

Victoria Police Again Lose Parity Round

The B.C. Mediation Commission has reaffirmed its earlier decision that the Victoria police force should not be given salary parity with its Lower Mainland counterparts. A review was ordered by Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

The commission's award, announced Wednesday, was a 14.56 per cent increase over a two-year contract, the same rate as in its decision made public in August. The Victoria force was seeking an award similar to the 17.5 per cent given in six Lower Mainland municipalities.

Under the commission's binding award, a Victoria first-class constable will receive $784 a month at the end of a new two-year contract, $48 less than his mainland counterpart.

From Vancouver, Bob Stewart, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers, said the commission's move would make presentation of cases for police wage increases in Oak Bay and Saanich "like running at a stone wall."

The Oak Bay and Saanich cases will be heard by the mediation commission later this month.

Victoria police were represented by Ed Lawson, president of the Teamsters' Joint Council.

Told of the decision by telephone while in San Diego Wednesday, Mr. Lawson said, "Shocking!"

Constable Kenneth Hansen, newly-elected president of the Victoria Police Officers' Union, said Wednesday:

"We are not happy with this. Our feelings haven't changed since the last time. We felt the mediation commission was isolating us as a different economic and geographic area from the Lower Mainland. We were hoping to be permitted to introduce evidence which would have disproved this, but we were not permitted to do so."

The commission in its original decision ruled Victoria policemen did not have as tough a job as police on the Lower Mainland.

Budget Substantially Below Requests

UVic Takes Austerity Path

The University of Victoria's budget for next year, presented to the provincial government and faculties, Dr. Bruce Partridge, university president, told was "substantially less" than the amount requested by the deans.

"Now we must find ways to pare down their needs," he said.

Dr. Partridge said the board of governors finance committee had determined the budget figure and sent it to Education Minister Donald Bracken in the afternoon.

He said the budget request was predicated on a full-time controlled enrolment of 5,750 students projected for December, 1970, an increase of 450 students, largely second, third and fourth year.

The senate voted to order the cancellation of classes for the period from 12:30 to 4 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 28, the day the university officially gets its new president, Dr. Partridge, and Prince Philip gets an honorary degree of doctor of science.

VACANCY FILLED

A vacancy on the senate was filled Wednesday night when the senate voted unanimously to elect Dr. Walter Barrs, assistant professor of physics at the university, as a member.

Full-time undergraduate enrolment at the university is up 15 per cent this year and now totals 5,231, compared to last year's 4,566.

CEILING SET

The figures were announced Wednesday night to the senate by Registrar R. J. Perry who said, that in addition, 231 students had enrolled in graduate studies, compared with 184 last year.

The board of governors this summer set an enrolment ceiling of 5,200, based on the capacity of physical and teaching resources for undergraduates.

Mr. Perry said that normally a few students leave during the first months of the term and the ceiling, therefore, should be close to the actual figure. First-year enrolment reached 1,968, just 12 fewer than the maximum established.

Harvest From Ranks

Long green line is 57 new recruits who just completed eight-week "commissioning from the ranks" course at Canadian Forces Officer Candidate School at CFB Esquimalt. Men were selected for promotion to commissioned rank after serving average of 12 years in Canadian Armed Forces. They were drawn from all three elements—sea, land and air. Class is third in Canada to graduate in new green uniforms. First two were at same school last March and July.—(Jim Ryan)

Baptists to Spend $300,000

New Church Near UVic

Plans were officially unveiled Wednesday night for the new $300,000 Emmanuel Baptist Church on Cedar Hill Cross Road just east of Henderson.

At the same time a bond campaign was launched to finance the project. Both took place at the annual Thanksgiving banquet of the present church at 1900 Fernwood attended by almost 400 persons.

The church represents two congregations, Stevenson Memorial and Emmanuel Baptist, amalgamated under the latter name in 1967 soon after the arrival of the present minister, Rev. Norman Archer. Wednesday's announcement came after two years of intensive work to raise funds and work toward the new church.

Construction is expected to start early in the new year.

A handsome modern structure has been designed by architects Wagg & Hambleton. The builder is Dewey DeVries.

The church has raised $100,000 for the new building and the bond drive announced Wednesday night is expected to raise the balance.

The total area of the new church will be more than 20,000 square feet compared with 10,000 in the present church. The sanctuary will accommodate 475 persons plus overflow space for 100, compared with a present maximum of 280. Seating will be arranged so that no person will be more than 35 feet from the minister in his pulpit.

"There are many other valuable additional features which will enable us to do a much more effective work for Christ in the city and on the nearby University of Victoria campus," Mr. Archer said.

They include an education building, fellowship hall and library, in addition to other offices and rooms. There will also be a custodian's apartment on the property.

The new church property is about two and one-third acres in size and is well-wooded.

Inquest on Drowning Delayed for Military

An inquest into the drowning death of Rtmn. Harold Wayne George, 19, of Vancouver scheduled in Victoria Law Courts for tonight has been postponed to allow a military board of inquiry to complete its findings.

Rtmn. George drowned Sept. 24 while on manoeuvres with the 1st Battalion of the Queen's Own Rifles on the Sooke River.

***

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Wednesday night the Attorney General's Department had been in touch with the army on the carrying out of the inquest.

The army board of inquiry will call 50 witnesses before deciding what findings to make.

The coroner said when the army had completed its inquiry he would receive a copy of the proceedings then it would be up to him to decide whether to hold a coroner's inquest or inquiry.

Police Suggest Diverted Route

Saanich police have suggested drivers take alternate routes into Victoria to avoid traffic snarls at a road repair site on Shelbourne at Donnelly.

Police suggested Cedar Hill Road or Richmond Road to bypass the section under repair. A police spokesman said the department had not received any complaints about traffic tie-ups.

Traffic at the repair point is controlled by a red light which permits single lines to pass the repair section alternately.

Police said a similar setup south of Cedar Hill Crossroad had worked well.

North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming, who has been a persistent critic of delay in implementation of the program, says some progress has been made, but adds that there are "massive problems yet to be solved."

***

And these are being dealt with in the shadow of a second referendum — one which could be for a spending program as high as $50,000,000 for acute-care beds.

Mayor Cumming said Tuesday, as he has said before, that he doubts, first, if the referendum can be ready for presentation by March or April and, secondly, that it would be accepted.

The mayor and others have said the rejection might be due to the delays, the multiplicity of governmental levels involved in the program, and the undeniable fact that both hospital and municipal people have been playing politics — often unknowingly.

***

And everyone agrees that rejection would be disastrous.

At the moment, more than 3,000 people are awaiting their turns on the operating tables of Victoria's two major hospitals. If surgery is elective, the patient is in for the long wait.

"While I do have my doubts, I still pray that the referendum, when submitted, will be successful," Mayor Cumming said. "In fact, it has just got to be successful, so desperate is the need for acute-care beds."

One major problem which has not been resolved is the placement of St. Joseph's Hospital — on its present site or elsewhere.

It is true that the constitution of the new South Vancouver Island Hospital Society has been approved by Health Minister Ralph Lofmark and that this will replace the former administration of St. Joseph's, which has been operated by the Sisters of St. Ann since 1875.

***

But it is also true that neither the hospital nor the site of the sisters' academy, upon which it was planned to build a new St. Joseph's, has been turned over to the new society.

It is rumored that the sisters have put an asking price on the hospital and academy property, and that it is well above $5,000,000.

The sale would be made by the religious order to the regional hospital board.

While Mayor Cumming would not speculate on the relocation of St. Joseph's or its sale, he did affirm that "there has been no positive decision whatever as to where St. Joseph's is going."

***

One positive step made in the past few months was the definite allocation of extended-care beds.

It was as follows: St. Joseph's, 150; Royal Jubilee, 150; Gorge Road Hospital, 150; Rest Haven Hospital, 150; Lady Minto, 15 and St. Mary's Priory, 75.

No firm decision has been made as to the location of St.

Joseph's or the adjacent building for the 150 extended-care beds. The hospital board seems to be acting on the assumption that the new hospital complex will remain on and about the present site, but no official decision has been made.

***

Royal Jubilee is reported to be having space trouble and to be dickering with the adjacent federal Veterans' Hospital for five acres of land nearby.

Approval has been given to Rest Haven Hospital to relocate on a site near the Patricia Bay Highway and Mount Newton Cross Road, but the land for the new hospital has not been purchased and no permission has been received from the provincial government for the purchase. The religious order which owns St. Mary's Priory, to which 75 extended-care beds were allocated, is reported to want to sell the whole institution to the regional hospital board. Until a decision is made on this issue, it is unlikely that construction will begin for extended-care beds.

Things are forging ahead at Gorge Road Hospital and planning is in the active stage.

Throughout the whole program, decisions are considered by the hospital advisory committee of the regional hospital board, by the regional hospital board itself, by the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service and by the provincial department of health and its minister, Mr. Lofmark.

"It is no wonder they bog down," Mayor Cumming said Tuesday.

Esquimalt	1	4	1	2	10
Oak Bay	1	3	2	2	8
Victoria	1	2	3	2	6

Next games: Friday—Esquimalt vs. Mt. Douglas at Carrington Park and Belmont vs. Claremont at Lochside Park, both at 4 p.m.; Oak Bay vs. Victoria at Royal Athletic Park, 4 p.m.

Victoria Tyees and Claremont are continuing to lead the race for the two berths in the Colonial Cup championship of the Inter-High School League. But Esquimalt Dockers and defending-champion Mount View Hornets aren't ready to concede.

With four games left for each of the four chief candidates, Tyees and Claremont share the lead with 12 points following Wednesday's games, three ahead of Hornets and Dockers, locked in a third-place tie.

Dockers remained the only team with an edge over Tyees this season by rallying from a three-goal deficit to salvage a 3-2 tie at Esquimalt.

Tyees, who won five games and tied one since losing 2-1, to Esquimalt on opening day, took their lead in the first 30 minutes on a goal by Bob Bjornson and two penalty shots by Stu Taylor.

Frank Morris replied for Esquimalt before the end of the half and then set up Murray Scott 10 minutes into the second half to cut the margin to one goal.

George Hyne then beat goal-keeper Wayne O'Malley with a 30-yard shot 15 minutes later to tie the game.

Esquimalt missed a chance to go ahead on a penalty five minutes later when O'Malley saved the shot by George Pakos. However, the centre-half saved the draw for Esquimalt in the final minute, by clearing off the line.

Dockers had an over-all edge in the match, but Tyees made their few penetrations count in the final half.

Dan Henry's four-goal production led the Claremont squad to its share of first place in a 7-2 victory over Oak Bay at Lochside Park after the clubs were tied 1-1, at the half.

Don Robinson, Irvin Hawkins and Bill Roper scored the other Claremont goals while Dave Mason scored both Oak Bay goals.

In the other game, Hornets blanked winless Belmont, 10-0, as Dan Green scored four goals to tie Tyees' Taylor for the individual lead with 16.

Bob Boldino also scored four times and Wally Falconer twice for Hornets, who led 3-0 at the intermission.

Claremont's victory over Belmont was the fourth in a row for the club, which has not lost a game since the start of the season.

Cardinals Obtain Allen In Seven-Player Trade

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Rich Allen, Philadelphia Phillies' controversial first baseman, was traded to St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday in a seven-player deal that may wind up in the office of the commissioner of baseball.

The Phillies sent Allen to the Cardinals for catcher Tim McCarver, outfielder Curt Flood, relief pitcher Joe Hoerner and utility outfielder Byron Browne. St. Louis also acquired infielder Cookie Rojas and pitcher Jerry Johnson.

The trade had hardly cooled off before the 32-year-old Flood, one of baseball's top defensive outfielders and a consistent hitter, announced he has retired from baseball.

"Once the trade is made it still goes," said a Cardinals spokesman. "The Phillies might throw it into the hands of the commissioner. We're out of it."

General manager John Quinn of the Phillies, who engineered the trade with Bing Devine, his St. Louis counterpart, said he had no comment on the Flood development until after he had had a chance to talk with the veteran outfielder. Earlier, at a news conference, Quinn had said the only thing guaranteed in the deal was that all players were physically sound.

Allen, the pivotal figure in the deal, was overjoyed at the move.

Phillies' owner Bob Carpenter commented "Richie and the Phillies couldn't put it together," when asked how he felt about the deal. Carpenter said he felt Quinn did "a very exceptional job getting the most talent for Allen."

In a statement released in St. Louis, Flood said: "I'm a younger I certainly would enjoy playing for Philadelphia. But under the circumstances, I have decided to retire from organized baseball and remain in St. Louis where I can devote full time to my business interests."

Flood said the announcement of the trade came "as a surprise and a personal disappointment."

Allen said he was glad to be out of Philadelphia. "Six years in this town is enough for anybody. I'm glad to be away from Quinn and all of them. They treat you like cattle."

The key to the deal for the Phillies was the acquisition of McCarver. The Phillies have been weak behind the plate.

McCarver, 27, has been in two All-Star games and has a .311 average for three World Series. Twice he led the league in defense, in 1965 and 1967.

For his 12-year career, Flood has 85 home runs, 633 runs batted in and a .293 average.

St. Louis obviously gambled that manager Red Schoendienst can accomplish with Allen what former Phillies' managers Gene Cards last season and for the last four years has been the club's top reliever. The entire Phillies' relief corps had only 21 saves in 1968.

The Cardinals finished a disappointing fourth in the National League's Eastern Division this year. The trade obviously was intended to give a new image to the flailing club. McCarver hit .250 and had 51 RBIs; Flood hit .283 with 57 RBIs; Browne started the season with Tulsa in the American Association and batted .226 in 22 games with St. Louis.

Johnson won 6 and lost 13, while Rojas hit .228 in 110 games for the Phillies.

He had a 39-38 record in his part of the 1966 season, in which the Reds finished seventh, and has since had two fourth-place finishes.

Bristol and Gordon were the seventh and eighth managerial casualties this year.

Previously, Boston Red Sox replaced Dick Williams with Eddie Kasko; Frank Lucchesi took over Philadelphia Phillies from Bob Skinner; Oakland Athletics switched from Hank Bauer to John McNamara; California Angels put Lefty Phillips in Bill Rigney's place; Don Gutteridge took over Chicago White Sox for Al Lopez and Pittsburgh Pirates dismissed Larry Shepard.

Reds, Royals Post Sign: Under New Management

Mortality rate for managers this season in the major baseball leagues rose to one out of three Wednesday with announced changes by Cincinnati Reds and Kansas City Royals.

No successor was named for Dave Bristol of the Reds, but the Royals picked Charlie Metro to take over from Joe Gordon. Gordon will assume other duties and Bristol has been offered another job.

OWN CHOICE

Gordon said he stepped down at his own request. He will become a liaison man and special scout for Royals, working under executive vice-president Ced Tallis.

"I thought somebody else could do a better job than I could with these fellows," Gordon said. "Frankly, I've reached the point where I just don't want to manage again."

Gordon, 54, led the Royals to 99 victories, second-best record by an expansion club, and fourth place in the American League's Western Division, ahead of Chicago White Sox and Seattle Pilots.

Bristol, offered a position in the front office, has been with the Cincinnati organization since 1951.

Shattering Changes in World Golf

There is no reason on earth why you should understand what Mr. Hsueh Yung-yo, the Bullock Motor Car Company, a polo-neck shirt, and Mr. Billy Casper have in common. But the fact is that between them they have produced a seven-day revolution in the world of golf.

Our world, indeed, is not remotely the same place it was this time last week. And here are the reasons why.

Seven days ago, there was hardly one of us in the Western hemisphere who would not have named America as the most powerful golfing nation on the face of the globe, with — per capita, per population — South Africa in second place, and Great Britain third. Enter Mr. Hsueh Yung-yo, who is about as familiar a figure in the world of professional sport as a Nighthorse-keeper.

What happens? Mr. Hsueh Yung-yo shoots the best round yet played in the World Cup competition in Singapore and — hey presto — the running order after three rounds was: 1. Formosa (alias Nationalist China); 2. The United States of America.

That is not just a turn-up for the books. It's a turn-up for all the comfortable, patronising attitudes we Westerners have held for years towards the challenge from the Far East.

I know the order was to change later in the World Cup, but let's recognise right now we can no longer talk comfortably about only the golfers we've heard of.

Until a few days ago another of our cherished beliefs remained unchallenged — namely that the greatest of all golf clubs in the world, The Royal and Ancient at St. Andrews, had standards of conduct and dress that seemed likely to stay unchanged for the next ten centuries.

Yet what happened? No sooner had I heard of the performance of Mr. Hsueh Yung-yo than the tidings hit me that the R. and A. had waived its deepest traditions, and were in future to permit in its public rooms golfers dressed in "polo neck shirts, sports shirts buttoned to the neck, open-neck shirts worn with a cravat."

Let me place on record that I am all for it. I have argued many times that I would far prefer to drink at a golf club bar with a man in a polo neck, who had just had a shower, than with a man in a fancy club tie who had forgotten to bath. Nevertheless, the change in the R. and A. rule shook me to the very core.

Then, seven days ago, we were still certain that Americans believed that America was still the undisputed Mecca of golf. Again what happened? Well, two things of startling significance.

Firstly, Mr. Billy Casper, recent winner of $55,000 in the Acan tournament, dropped a small remark in passing that he is to make a lone invasion of Britain next year to compete for a full month on the British circuit. The only parallel I can think of is if President Nixon announced that he is to take a month off to visit Westminster to learn what politics is all about! It was almost the biggest boost that British golf has received this entire, dramatic summer. But not quite.

For hard on the heels of Casper's announcement, came news that the Bullock Motor Car Company is scrapping its $150,000 golf tournament in the United States. The reason? Simply that its fixture dates are so close to the British Open Championship that it is losing more big-name American golfers than it can afford to the rival event across the Atlantic.

Now, let's not kid ourselves in Britain. The Bullock event was a much bigger gold mine for golfers than the British Open. Yet such, once again, is the status of our Open championship that the top American players now have no doubts in their minds that they must come to Britain if they are to stay in the top echelon of international players.

It has all happened in a few days. And as I look back on the significance of it all, I think I can honestly say that I have never known seven more momentous days for golf in my entire career.

Trotting Star Retired

MONTREAL (UPI) — Neville Fride, the world's fastest trotter, has pulled up lame and is being retired to stud in Kentucky, track officials at Blue Bonnets Raceway disclosed Wednesday.

Stanley Dancer, trainer and driver of Neville Fride, telephoned officials at the Montreal oval from New York City and informed them he was withdrawing the horse from a $25,000 event here Oct. 19.

Dancer told Blue Bonnets racing-director Mike McCormack that Neville Fride had pulled up lame in a training session and was being put to stud at the Stoney Creek Farm in Paris, Ky.

Nevada Says No to Clay

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The governor of Nevada Wednesday refused to permit a proposed boxing match in Las Vegas between Cassius Clay, the unfrocked heavyweight champion, and Joe Frazier, who is recognized in five states as the titleholder.

There was no indication Clay of Frazier had agreed to such a fight.

Travel Pads Songbook

By BILL THOMAS

The Empress Hotel is the only spot offering imported live entertainment and the hotel's management plans to continue bringing in top-flight performers.

Larrie Forbes has been appointed to the staff of the hotel to book acts and also to partner his brother John in providing music for dancing six nights a week.

The season opened with singer Anita de Palma and she will be doing two shows nightly until Wednesday. Miss de Palma has repertoire of English, French, Spanish and Italian songs, and she sings them all convincingly.

Empress 'Import' Shines

Miss de Palma recently moved her home from New York to Montreal, but she still commutes for regular television shows. She is a regular guest on the Merv Griffin late show.

an earlier experience in Winnipeg.

"After our wedding in Mexico, I wanted us to go to New York for our honeymoon," explained Miss de Palma, "but we couldn't enter the United States unless we went through an immigration procedure."

"I had played Montreal and Toronto, so I decided we should come to Canada. The next thing I knew, we were trying to decide on a city. I had never been to Winnipeg so we flew there. It was early December and we were straight out of Mexico, but the people made up for the weather. It was this stay that decided us."

"We might have stayed in Mexico, but conditions there are intolerable. I got thoroughly sick of having to pay bribes to petty officials for almost everything. I feel happy in Montreal."

Miss de Palma's travels have added to her repertoire and given her a command of French and Spanish. Her mother is Italian and singing in that language came naturally.

The vitality of her performance produces a ready response from her audience and even some of the Empress Hotel's more staid customers find themselves singing along.

Booth Public Spot Even If 'Rented'

WINDSOR, Ont. — A telephone booth is a public place even when it is in use, Provincial Judge Gordon Stewart decided.

He rejected a suggestion by Gary Joseph Neapolon, 23, of Windsor, charged with being drunk in a public place, who argued that by putting a dime in the telephone he had rented the booth and it was no longer a public place.

"Where did you get your legal training?" Judge Stewart asked, fining Neapolon $15 and costs.

Pinkie Tipoff in Finger Case

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman being mugged bit off the tip of her assailant's little finger, police identified the prints on it and Wednesday arrested William Allen, 29, and charged him with robbery.

Police said the tip of Allen's left pinkie was missing when he was picked up in mid-Manhattan.

Working with the print of the bitten-off digit, police searched their files and two days ago matched the prints of the pinkie with a name and face.

Police said the fingertip was being held for possible use as evidence.

Roast Turkey in Aluminum Foil

Stuff Turkey just before roasting, allowing  $\frac{1}{2}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup stuffing per pound dressed weight. Rub cavity with salt and then spoon-in stuffing. Shake bird to settle stuffing but do not pack. Close opening by placing skewers across it and lacing shut with cord. Tie drumsticks up, and grease skin thoroughly. Place on rack in shallow pan, do not cover. Roast according to chart. Allow turkey to stand 20 minutes before carving. Makes the carving easier and slices neater.

Roasting time in Aluminum Foil at 450 F.
8 to 10 lbs.—2 $\frac{1}{4}$  to 2 $\frac{3}{4}$  hours. 18 to 20 lbs.—3 $\frac{1}{4}$  to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  hours.
14 to 16 lbs.—3 to 3 $\frac{1}{4}$  hours. 22 to 24 lbs.—3 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 4 hours.
When using Meat Thermometer, it should register 165° F. if inserted in stuffing or 200° F. when inserted in thigh.

Secret Plans Found in Stolen Car

LONDON (Reuters) — Secret plans for the Royal Navy's new Sea Dart guided missile were found in the luggage compartment of a stolen car, a government spokesman said Tuesday. The plans, recovered apparently untouched, were missing for two days.

They were locked in the car of an employee of the ministry of technology. The car was stolen in London Friday night. A ministry spokesman said the car was recovered after a police search, and an inquiry was being held.

The Sea Dart, a medium-range surface-to-air guided missile, is being fitted to the Royal Navy's new missile destroyers. Built by Hawker Siddeley, the two-stage weapon has been fired successfully at Woomera, the Australian rocket range. The radar-guided Sea Dart is able to intercept high and low flying missiles.

Simon Fraser Cuts Courses

BURNABY (CP) — Simon Fraser University Wednesday cancelled 10 courses for the remainder of the fall semester because of a dispute in the department of political science, sociology and anthropology.

Eleven PSA courses are being continued by six faculty members who have not joined others in a "strike." The nine professors who stopped teaching last month have been suspended and dismissal proceedings have been instituted against them.

The dispute involves establishment of indefinite trusteeship over the department by SFU's administration, and refusal of full-time jobs to 10 teachers in the department.

ERMA BOMBECK's Self-Destructing Message:

Three Minutes and 30 Seconds

A teacher with some imagination assigned a class to write an essay on "What I didn't do last summer." The mother of one of the youngsters shared her son's composition with me. It was quite a commentary on the American way of life. "My Dad and I were going fishing but we didn't have the time. We were going to an amusement park, but we couldn't make it. We were going camping and just goof around, but we ran out of weekends."

There's more, but it's pretty repetitious. The richest nation in the world is losing one of its greatest natural resources: time.

Mow the lawn. Change the oil. Get a haircut. Build a boat. Line up a sitter. Spray the roses. Wash the dog. No time.

Drop off the cleaning. Pick up the vacuum sweeper. Get teeth cleaned, make 15 phone calls for baked goods for the bazaar. Get a gallon of milk. Buy new gym shoes.

No time.

Return books to library. Write a letter to your sister. Pick up theatre tickets. Have the draperies cleaned. Get a corn removed. Wash the car.

No time. For what? Have "things" become more important than people? I wonder about some of the youngsters who feel a need to escape through drugs to a private world where time stands still and they can view it through brightly-colored eyeballs. Some are kooks and follow the crowd. Others surely have some reason. Did we turn them off when we turned the TV switch on?

No time. This record will last 1 1/2 minutes. This article will take approximately 3 minutes, 30 seconds to read. The exact time is 23 minutes after six . . .

"That's a jungle out there, son. Daddy has to make a living in it. We all agreed we wanted to take a winter vacation, didn't we?"

"Mama is busy. I've got to get this kitchen scrubbed before club. Now run along."

The child who wrote the composition has not matured yet. His energies haven't turned to ambition; his values to total involvement; his dreams to competition. He only knows there is a warm, secure feeling with his family that he wants and needs. He doesn't understand that a day filled with promise can be spoken for before it dawns. He can't understand what could possibly be more important than two people sitting together in silence in a boat trying to outsmart a bass.

In time he will. God help us. He will.

Lawyers Disagree

Sirhan's Mother Plans UN Plea

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The mother of condemned assassin Sirhan Bishara Sirhan said Wednesday she would ask the United Nations to improve the life of her son.

Mrs. Mary Sirhan, 35, told a news conference at her home she also would ask the UN to seek peace in the Middle East and end the suffering of the people of Palestine.

Sirhan Sirhan considered himself a Palestinian Arab and testified at his trial he shot Senator Robert Kennedy because he was angered over the Democratic presidential contender's support of a proposal to send 50 Phantom jets to Israel.

Mrs. Sirhan was vague on what she would ask the UN to do about her son, if she is allowed to speak. The UN lacks jurisdiction because Sirhan is a prisoner of the state of California.

Mrs. Sirhan held a rock in her lap during part of the news conference. She said she "broke" the grey and red rock from San Quentin prison when she visited her son on death row.

Mrs. Sirhan said she keeps the rock in her home because Sirhan is "closer" to her that way.

Mrs. Sirhan said she had been thinking about going to UN headquarters for the past eight months and decided to do so against the advice of the attorneys handling the appeal of her son.

"They've been telling me not to go," the grey-haired woman said. "But my heart is aching for the whole world. I hope I will be able to speak."

A Lovelier You

No-Bra Fashions Not for Everyone

By MARY SUE MILLER

Once was, young teens wheeled and worried a first bra from their mothers. Now the procedure seems to be reversed. Older teens are espousing the natural, no-bra look so in favor with the Paris and American couture.

It all started in the recent past with the little nothing body-suits and bra-rips, designed to softly underscore the soft cling of see-through fashions; to create an image of an unconfined and perfect figure.

The step between a little bra and no bra was merely a matter of a few flippy books.

The whole idea unsettles mothers, horrifies grandmothers. It gets the self-conscious 30-plus set uptight. Were a teen or post-teen to face up to problems, she might not be so quick to flip.

Granted that figures these days must never be so constructed as to appear unreal, like a dressmaker's dummy. Naturalness is everyone's goal. But whose figure is so trim and firm that improvements are superfluous?

And here's where new natural body-shapers come in. Minimal bras for instance: some are pre-shaped, many are seamless, all are contoured to minimize, maximize or plunge. Party girdles and body suits are second skins of silky powernets and Lycra tricot. You just can't tell you wear one. Your clothes just flow over a lovely figure. That's all.

Wig Creased by Bullet

HARBOR CITY, Calif. (LAT) — Her blonde wig was shot off by a gunman who tried to abduct her here Tuesday, Joyce Trapp, 22, a cocktail waitress, complained to police.

Miss Trapp said she stopped at a traffic signal and a man climbed into her car with a revolver. He threatened to kill her, she said.

She was ordered to cram a silk handkerchief in her mouth, tie a necktie over it, and get in the back of the car, Miss Trapp said, but instead she fled up an alley.

A bullet whistled past her head and her wig flew off, the young woman said, but she reached a nearby house, roused occupants, and called police.

Officers found Miss Trapp's bullet-creased wig. They are still searching for her car.

Kennedy's Willing, But...

BOSTON (AP) — Senator Edward Kennedy doesn't want to block an inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne but wants his rights to be protected if one is held, his lawyer said Wednesday. Edward Hanify, counsel for Kennedy, asked the state supreme court to prescribe a new body of rules for the conduct of inquests so that Kennedy and other witnesses may have counsel with the right to cross-examine witnesses. He asked that the inquest be closed to the public.

Hanify also challenged the constitutionality of the state's inquest law.

Judge James Boyle of the Edgartown District Court, where the inquest was scheduled, had ruled that lawyers for witnesses could be present only while their clients were testifying, and would be barred from cross-examining witnesses.

Boyle also ruled that the inquest would be public, but specified that only accredited reporters would be admitted to the 132 seats available in the Edgartown courtroom.

Miss Kopechne, 28, was found dead in Kennedy's car July 19 after it plunged into a tidal pond on Chappaquiddick Island. The inquest was ordered by District Attorney Edmund Dinis, whose jurisdiction includes the island off Cape Cod. A coroner had ruled the death a drowning.

The appeal was taken under advisement with no indication when a decision would be announced. Said Hanify: "It is our contention that the statute, particularly the requirement that the judge report the name of any person whose unlawful act or negligence contributed to a death, and the provision for the judge to order an immediate arrest, makes an inquest an accusatory proceeding."

If the court does not declare the inquest law unconstitutional, Hanify said, it should "fortify the statute with an infusion of constitutional protection by orders to the superior court and other courts."

Hanify also requested that the court direct Boyle to disqualify himself from the inquest since he is a party to the present Supreme Court appeal.

The petitions by Kennedy and nine other prospective witnesses who were among the Kennedy group named Boyle as the respondent.

In opposition to the petitions, Assistant Attorney General Joseph Hurley said that while Boyle had announced in Edgartown he was going to have the inquest open to the public through the press, the petitioners made no objections until they filed briefs in the current appeal.

Hanify said if the inquest were held in secret, the person named would be protected and the report could be withheld until the matter had reached another legal status such as indictment.

Hurley said that Boyle's decision to open the hearing to reporters was justified by the vast public interest in the Kennedy accident, demonstrated by the number of reporters seeking entrance to the inquest.

THOUSAND O.A.K.S., Calif. (UPI) — A carnival atmosphere prevailed Wednesday at the auction of 1,800 wild and semi-tame animals as bidders snapped up the stars and supporting players of many jungle movies.

Before gaveling off the animals from Jungland, a bankrupt private zoo, the auction house put on a lion and tiger show for the bidders from circuses, carnivals, zoos and movie studios, plus the curious.

"Here is something to help make friends with your neighbors," cried the auctioneer. "An untrained, female tiger. Who'll start the bidding at $400?" "One hundred and fifty dollars," shouted a red-haired man with a beard.

Eventually the price went to $325. "Sold to the man who wants to get rid of his mother-in-law," said the auctioneer as the hammer fell.

Highest price early in the afternoon was brought by two orangutans at $10,000 each. They were bought by the Brownsville, Tex., zoological garden.

The sale included 32 big jungle cats, nine multi-ton elephants, an assortment of hippos, 50 zebras, buffalo and horses, a raft of bears, hyenas, wallabies, turtles, seals and other members of the animal kingdom.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We have a daughter 16 and a son 15 whom we cannot leave alone in the house because they will kill each other. I realize it is normal for a brother and a sister to argue and fight occasionally but our two are like animals.

My husband told me this morning that if something isn't done to make these kids behave like civilized human beings, he is moving out of the house into a rented room.

Last night we returned from a meeting and Linda looked as if she'd been in an accident. Her nose was bleeding and an eye was swollen shut. Brad showed us the place in his scalp where Linda had torn out a handful of hair. It seems Linda would not get off the telephone. Brad was expecting a call from his girl and after an hour and five minutes, he "blew his cool."

In two years Linda will go to college, if her brother doesn't kill her before then. I can't wait two years. Please tell me what to do. They've had at least five fist fights since January. — War In Cincinnati.

Assault and Battery

Dear War: It is normal for siblings to have disagreements, but what you describe is more than brother-sister squabbling. It is assault and battery. Such naked hostility and out-of-control violence needs investigating. I recommend counselling for both Linda and Brad. They must learn how to dissipate anger and handle frustration in ways that are socially acceptable.

Dear Ann Landers: Jerome and I were married 16 years ago—a double-ring ceremony. He used to wear his wedding ring all the time. About six months ago he began to leave his ring at home when he went to work. I thought it was just absentmindedness so I asked him about it. He reluctantly told me that he has developed a little arthritis in his fingers and the ring is hard to get off and on. When I offered to have it made larger he mumbled, "Don't bother."

A few days ago I suggested to Jerome that he carry the ring in his pocket as a reminder that he is married and the father of six children. He became annoyed and snapped, "Don't be stupid."

Lunch-Hour Suspicion

Jerome is home every night and has always been a good husband and father but now I wonder if perhaps he isn't seeing someone during lunch hour—someone who thinks he is single. What do you think? — Mrs. N.

Dear N.: I think the father of six children doesn't need to carry his wedding ring in his pocket to remind him he is married. All he has to do is look at the grocery bills. A man who is at home every night is not likely to be cheating during lunch hour.

Dear Ann Landers: How can a girl tell if a fellow really likes her without coming right out and asking her? I am dying to know but I'm too shy to put the question to him. Mr. Dreamboat is fairly extroverted but he has never verbalized his feelings about me. It would mean a lot if he'd say something. You are awfully good with words. Can you work up a sentence or two that will tell me what I want to know without being too brash or forward? — Violets Are Blue.

Dear V.: If you've got the music, you don't need the words. It's how the guy treats you that counts. Settle, Baby, settle.

All Opinions On Labor To Be Heard

OTTAWA (CP) — The labor department's national conference on industrial relations Oct. 27-29 will focus attention on the attitudes, progressive or otherwise, of all concerned, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday.

Some 200 representatives of government, management and labor have said they will attend the conference, he told a news conference, and:

"We'll see those groups which are not prepared to move forward and those that are."

Mackasey and his department have been beating the drums for more than a month now on the conference which they say will be the first of its kind in Canada.

The minister pointed to the just-announced attendance by Prime Minister Trudeau as an indication of how important the government considers the whole matter of industrial relations to be.

The conference will be held in conjunction with the 50th anniversary of the International Labor Organization and will be conducted much like the ILO's own conferences. ILO is a government - management - labor body.

MAJOR LEADERS

All 10 provincial ministers of labor have said they will attend. Mackasey told reporters and all leaders of major unions. All sessions would be open to the press.

The conference comes at a time when the government is considering amendments to the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act which covers more than 400,000 employees in industries under federal jurisdiction.

The minister who announced some time ago his intention to expand his department's mediation role and to enter disputes before the strike stage, said five or six mediators will be hired.

SOME SPECIALISTS

He plans to employ a mediation specialist in the areas of ports, airlines and possibly Crown corporations.

"We want to plug the department of labor into the potential sources of irritation."

He is expected to introduce labor law amendments at the session of Parliament that is to begin this fall and run until next summer.

Deep South Tourist Luring Spreads

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government tourist promotion projects designed to lure visitors from the southern United States, Latin America and Western Europe are in the works, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Tuesday.

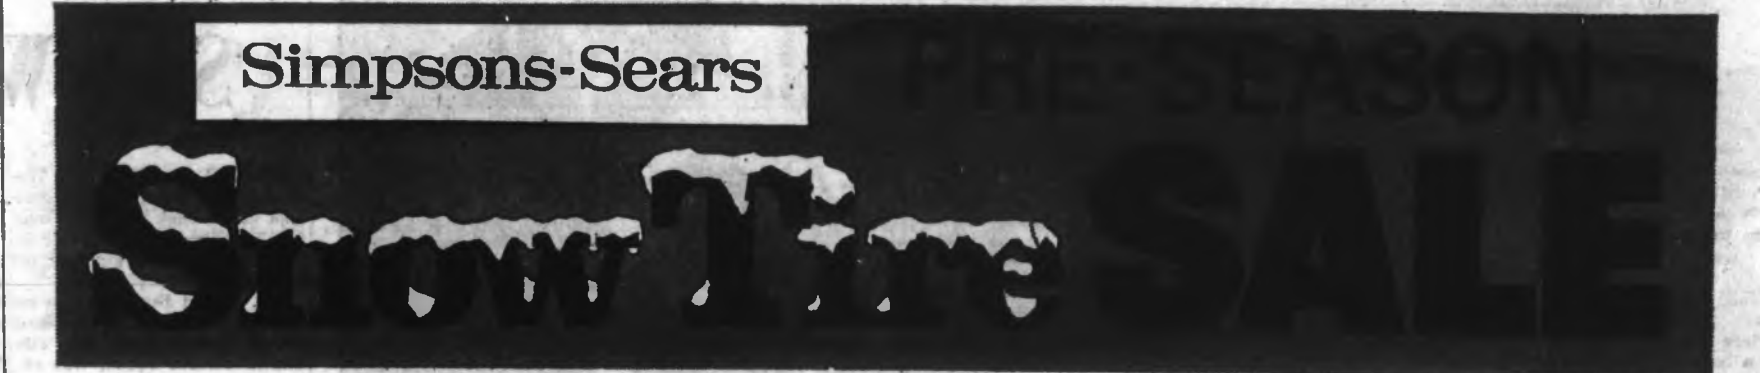

"We have new plans afoot to tap the travel market in the southern United States," Pepin told delegates at the 24th federal-provincial tourism conference.

There are 50,000,000 Americans in these states, the minister said, a rich potential tourist market for Canada. Their distance from the border would require promotion of air travel and package tours if they were to be attracted to Canada.

He also said Latin America "annually sends hundreds of thousands of visitors to the U.S. but all too few to Canada."

Hit Twice in Montreal

Firearms Company Moving to Florida

MONTREAL (CP) — The International Firearms Company, smashed and looted by thugs on Montreal's night of mob rule, said Wednesday it is moving its head office to Miami, Fla.

Bill Sacher, president of the Montreal-based company, said the company, a firearms and ammunition retailer, has had enough trouble here.

"We've had it — we're clearing out," he said in a telephone call from Miami. "And we're happy to walk away with our lives."

Sacher, a Canadian native, said he made the decision after consulting his Montreal store manager, Andrew Rod.

$3,000 THEFT

Looters broke windows in the International Firearms store in Fleury Street during the police strike and made off with an estimated $3,000 worth of guns and ammunition.

In 1964, two of the store's employees were shot to death in a looting incident that involved separatists. The Sachers and their six children moved to Miami immediately afterwards, although the company continued to direct its 18-store North American chain from here.

The International Firearms Company began here in 1946 as a small shop selling war surplus goods.

Chicago Riots

Orders To Kill Bared

CHICAGO (UPI) — An undercover agent testified Wednesday that Yippee leader Jerry Rubin exhorted antiwar demonstrators to "kill the pigs" as police and thousands of protesters clashed in a wild melee in Grant Park during Democratic National Convention week.

Robert Pierson, who said he served as "bodyguard" to two demonstration leaders during the 1968 rioting, also told a federal court jury that Black Panther leader Bobby Seale urged protesters to "buy .357 magnums, .45 calibre pistols and carbines and take to the streets."

Pierson, a husky policeman attached to the Cook County state's attorney's office, said he infiltrated to the core of the protest ranks by growing a beard, letting his hair grow long, donning a black leather jacket and passing himself off as a member of a motorcycle gang.

GUARD FOR TWO

For the first three days of the convention, he testified, he walked side by side with demonstration leaders as a guard for Rubin and Abbott "Abbie" Hoffman, another leader of the Youth International Party (Yippies).

Rubin, Hoffman, Seale and five other men are on trial before U.S. district court Judge Julius Hoffman on charges of conspiring to incite the riots that swept Chicago streets and parks.

CORNER, KILL

Pierson testified that early in the week Rubin said demonstrators should corner one or two policemen and kill them. When rioting erupted in Grant Park on Wednesday, he said, Rubin jumped up and down and screamed: "Kill the pigs! Kill the pigs!"

In a between-sessions news conference, Rubin said he "never suggested that anyone be killed." He admitted to newsmen that Pierson served as his bodyguard but said the policeman was an "agent provocateur" who, in his testimony, was "on a fantasy trip."

Death 'Appalling, Stupid' Says Widow of Officer

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec provincial policeman shot in the back and killed during Tuesday night's violence in Montreal was a 32-year-old father of four.

Cpl. Robert Dumas, a top investigator in a combined RCMP, provincial and city anti-subversive squad, was observing demonstrators outside a bus-company garage when he was shot.

The demonstration degenerated into a shoot-out and the garage and several buses were set afire.

Dumas, a veteran of 12 years on the provincial force, lived in a modest home in suburban Longueville with his wife, Chantelle, 30, three daughters, Christine, 16, Diane, 8, Sylvie, 5, and a son, Michel, 11.

Interviewed at their home where she was surrounded by friends and relatives Wednesday, Mrs. Dumas said she learned of his death on television.

"They didn't name him but they said an officer of the provincial police had been killed," she said.

"I guessed right away it was him. I called headquarters; they told me nothing was confirmed."

"A quarter of an hour later, a plainclothesman and the chaplain arrived at my home. I didn't need to know anything more."

Her husband's death, Mrs. Dumas said, was appalling and stupid.

But she did not blame Montreal police, whose walkout brought about a six-hour spree of anarchy and destruction in downtown Montreal.

"For the moment, I'd rather say nothing. Later perhaps, I want to say nothing I would regret."

"But deep down, it doesn't surprise me. My husband — not because he was my husband — but he wasn't afraid of anything. I was always afraid he would end up like this."

Dumas' immediate superior, Lieut. Oscar Latour, said provincial police regulations and the best interests of the security squad allowed him "only to say he was a very, very good police officer."

A moment later, he added: "But he was much more than that."

Investigation of the slaying, the second killing of a Canadian policeman in two days, is being handled by Montreal police.

Turgid Broth Spreads East

Lake-Killer Objective

OTTAWA (CP) — Eutrophication, as described in a report released Wednesday by the International Joint Commission, is a big word for an ugly, stinking and unhealthy process.

It is the fate, the report by the Canadian and American IJC scientists states, which has befallen the western basin of Lake Erie and which is overtaking the rest of the lower Great Lakes system, including the St. Lawrence River.

ALGAE INCREASE

The process involves the increase of plant life—particularly various forms of algae and slime—until coastal waters resemble a turgid broth and deeper waters, depleted of oxygen by high rates of decomposition of plant materials, become capable of supporting only the poorest sort of fish.

It is the final stage in the life history of a lake.

The report notes that most of Canada's northern lakes were created by glacial action 6,000 to 12,000 years ago and that many remain in their clear, oxygen-rich condition, supporting little plant life.

But in past decades, discharges of phosphates and nitrates have upset the natural balance of life in Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, permitting rapid growth of algae in the lakes.

The report lists the resulting problems:

- A deterioration in the taste and odor of domestic water supplies and clogging of filters in water treatment plants.

- The fouling of beaches.
- A disappearance of valuable sport and commercial species of fish such as pike, herring and whitefish.

- The littering of beaches in summer with the stinking remains of alewife, smelt, perch, white bass and gizzard shad.

PHOSPHORUS FIEST

The scientists of the international water pollution committees for Lake Erie and the Lake Ontario-St. Lawrence River area have settled on limiting phosphorus discharges as the first step in combatting eutrophication.

Their report to the IJC suggests phosphorus as contained in various compounds in household detergents and sewage wastes can be more easily and more cheaply controlled than nitrogen and may possibly be of greater importance to algae growth.

The first recommendation is for elimination of phosphate compounds from household detergents as soon as possible, preferably by 1972.

"If the technology for detergent phosphate removal can be quickly developed, an almost immediate elimination of the phosphorus loading to Lake Erie and Lake Ontario could be achieved to prevent further deterioration of these lakes while sewage treatment facilities are being built," the report says.

Liberals' Challenge 'Break with Church'

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican newspaper Osservatore della Domenica suggested Wednesday that many progressive priests who challenge the Roman Catholic hierarchy have broken with the church.

An Osservatore editorial attacked liberal priests from 10 European countries who will hold a conference during the world synod of bishops opening Saturday in the Vatican.

While the bishops tackle the problem of collegiality — the sharing of power between the Pope and the episcopate — the liberals will demand that the church shed its centralized and authoritarian structures, according to sources close to the priests.

The liberals plan to begin an eight-day meeting Friday.

A 44-page working paper prepared for their meeting calls for limiting the Pope's term of office, reducing his powers, abolishing the college of cardinals and papal emissaries and reforming the Roman Curia.

It is hard to discover what the liberal priests want, the editorial said. While the priests affirmed to be still in the church, it said, many "have in fact already left it, because to be in the church means to accept and to profess the fundamental truths that constitute the inalienable patrimony of the deposit of faith."

Two GOP Leaders Oppose Nixon Man

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Senate Republican leaders Wednesday announced their opposition to the U.S. Supreme Court nomination of Clement Haynsworth, accused by his chief Senate opponent of five cases of apparent conflict of interest.

Haynsworth's confirmation was severely jolted when Senate GOP whip Robert Griffin and Senator Margaret Chase Smith, chairman of the Senate Republican Conference, said they could not endorse President Nixon's nominee because of questions about his financial dealings. Griffin spearheaded the drive that led ultimately to Abe Fortas' forced resignation from the supreme court last May. He said he opposed Nixon's choice of a successor because of "legitimate and substantial doubt" about Haynsworth's sensitivity to the court's high ethical standards.

Senator Birch Bayh (D-Ind.) issued a "bill of particulars" accusing Haynsworth of sitting in on at least five cases in which he had a substantial stock interest in litigants involved.

The financial interest in each case was, said Bayh, "substantial enough to require disqualification and to constitute impropriety under the canons of judicial ethics."

Bayh said the cases involved Brunswick Corp., Grace Lines Inc., Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Maryland Casualty Co. and Greenville Community Hotel Corp. Haynsworth owned stock in each, or its parent firm, and ruled in favor of each except for Olin Mathieson, Bayh said. In any event, he said, Haynsworth should have disqualified himself in every case.

Bayh charged that the justice department had "embarked on a calculated effort to sanitize the records upon which individual members of the Senate must decide this important question." Griffin was joined by Mrs.

Smith, who had her colleagues on the Senate floor that the nomination "will further damage the public confidence in the court" and that she hoped it would be withdrawn.

Their decisions, relayed in separate letters to the president, raised the possibility of additional GOP defections on the Haynsworth nomination.

The White House said Nixon still supported Haynsworth and was confident of confirmation. Asked if the president was disappointed by Griffin's decision, press secretary Ronald Ziegler said: "He didn't have an expression of joy."

Haynsworth, chief judge of the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, was not available for comment.

Griffin's announcement doubtless shook the administration, which had supported seating him on the Senate Judiciary committee last month to provide an additional vote for Haynsworth. Griffin took Senator Everett Dirksen's place on the committee.

Even without his support, Haynsworth appeared to have at least a one-vote majority on the 17-member committee in his favor. The committee delayed a not disclosed their decisions.

meeting on the nomination until today, and the Senate leadership sent telegrams to all its members urging them to attend.

The list of Haynsworth's opponents on the Senate floor was growing. Mrs. Smith said she believed "there is much more opposition among Republican senators than is generally realized."

The latest UPI survey showed 37 senators — enough to thwart any attempt to halt a possible filibuster — were against the nomination, 33 supported it and 30 were either undecided or had not disclosed their decisions.

Passenger Left At Crash Scene

A 20-year-old man who didn't stop his car Tuesday after one of his passengers had fallen out during an accident was fined $400 Wednesday by Judge William Oester in Victoria Provincial Court.

John G. Keen of 643 John pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Court was told Keen was driving east on Bay at approximately 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, when he jumped a red light at Bay and Cook, colliding with another car.

One of the passengers in his car fell out, but Keen drove for another four blocks before stopping his car, court was told.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte said Keen walked back to the scene of the accident and talked to police without identifying himself.

Keen said he wanted to make sure nobody was hurt in the accident.

Court was told there had been no injuries and damage was minor.

Buildings Take Holiday

The legislative buildings will be closed Monday for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The Provincial Museum will also be closed Monday. It will be open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

And there will be no postal delivery Thanksgiving Monday, only evening street box collection. There will be normal holiday service for special delivery mail and mail receipts and dispatches.

John G. Flett, 18, of 840 Victoria, was remanded for trial until Oct. 31 after pleading not guilty to charges of causing bodily harm with intent to wound, possession of a dangerous weapon, and theft over $50.

Flett has been charged in connection with an assault on a Bay store detective last week.

Randolph G. McDougall, 20, of 802 Hereward, was sentenced to two months in prison after he was found guilty Tuesday of theft over $50.

Court was told McDougall stole a pair of shoes from The Bay.

Mission: Birds Not Impossible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Could crows, ravens, jays, hawks and vultures replace humans in such "dangerous, difficult, expensive or boring" facets of war as aerial photography, gunnery, steering of missiles, detection of mines and search-and-destroy missions?

The U.S. defence department has signed a $800,000 contract with the University of Mississippi to find out.

The three-year contract with the university says "this program is based on the supposition that birds will eventually replace humans for activities that are dangerous, difficult, expensive or boring" in war.

"Much of the research will relate to complex forms of stimulus control," it continues. "for example, visual search, auditory pattern recognition, pursuit and tracking, controlled locomotion and operation of manipulanda while flying."

The studies will concentrate on the adaptability to war of crows, ravens, jays, hawks, vultures, doves, parrots, mynahs, chickens and pigeons.

The contract was disclosed in a department circular seeking ornithologists to work on the project. At least one researcher was less than enthusiastic.

"I read it, I re-read it, and I read it again," said one scientist quoted in the Washington Post, "and I still couldn't believe it. It's insane."

Kiernan Heads Delegation

B.C. Inviting Tours From Down Under

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan flies to Australia and New Zealand today on an 11-day promotional tour in partnership with CP Air.

The province, through the travel industry department, has budgeted $15,000 as its share of the cost of the venture, but Mr. Kiernan said it was hoped the job would be done for less.

Mr. Kiernan said they expected to meet and talk to 1,000 travel agents in Australia and New Zealand, stressing the value of stop-overs on Canada's West Coast for passengers travelling to and from Europe as well as making B.C. their clients' major vacation choice.

The party will break the return trip in Suva, Fiji, to attend the Pacific Region Tourist Conference Oct. 22 to 25, and is scheduled to return to B.C. Oct. 26.

The B.C. delegation, which includes the travel industry department's director of special promotions, Ken Woodward, businessman John Dennis of B.C. Outdoor Vacations and two CP Air officials, will visit Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne and Auckland.

Medical Fields Criticized

Management Too Costly

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Administrators and educationists ignore the growing evidence that poor management is causing uncontrolled health care costs, Dr. J. D. Wallace, executive director of Toronto General Hospital, said Wednesday.

He told the national health manpower conference that it is time somebody "rocked the boat" by espousing modern management concepts instead of awaiting a tidal wave that might swamp the health care ship.

"An increasing number of official reports indicate that a major factor in the uncontrolled costs of health care results from poor management practices," said Dr. Wallace, who was co-chairman of a study of health care costs set up this year by the federal-provincial health ministers.

Deputy ministers, directors of health plans, hospital administrators and deans of health science faculties "ignore the implications of these comments and recommendations."

The economic implications of uncontrolled development of comprehensive health services nationally were staggering. With medical care insurance only the second phase, "we are in serious financial trouble," Dr. Wallace, whose audience included many senior public administrators and educators, accused medical education of turning out the wrong kinds of health care workers in the wrong quantities to cope with public needs.

"In the medical profession we have in my opinion over-specialization to an almost ridiculous degree. The reverse has been true in nursing. That profession appears to have refused to recognize the fact that in this age of increasing technology in health care no one type of nurse can be all things to all people."

He said he opposes any major expansion of facilities to educate health professionals.

"We could and should devote more of our resources to the education of the assistants to the professionals at the technological and technical levels."

The current and growing need was for more general practitioners or first-contact doctors, not more doctor specialists.

Dr. J. F. McCreary, dean of medicine at the University of British Columbia, challenged Dr. Wallace's apportioning all the blame to the teachers for a medical profession top-heavy with specialists.

"The failure of the hospitals to permit general practitioners to work in them is as great a reason for this imbalance," Dr. McCreary said.

Dr. Wallace said that as a former general practitioner he recognizes it is not the hospital itself but the regulations of the medical staff that present barriers to the GP.

Independence Comes with Training

Retarded Just Want Compassion—Not Pity

By HELEN MORRIS

"Pity is a cheap emotion," says Miss Fiona Campbell-Sayers, executive director of the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded.

"We don't want the sob-story stuff. . . It's an insult to the retarded people themselves as well as distressing to their parents and relatives."

"We want compassion, but not pity."

So Miss Campbell-Sayers and the association are working to make retarded people in Victoria not pitiable.

"Our work is the training of the retarded to become helpful to themselves and acceptable to the community."

Step one of independence training is the activity centre at 1450 Elford, where retarded people come from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. five days a week and learn how to do their own cooking and cleaning.

Miss Campbell-Sayers said the centre's regulars get a great kick out of their household accomplishments. And for some it can open the door into the community.

"They do overcome their handicaps. Some of them might later be able to take work doing a bit of cleaning."

The activity centre group also goes swimming, bowling, and square-dancing once a week. The square-dancing and bowling sessions are open not just to activity centre people, but to any retarded Victorian over 15.

Retarded people with greater learning potential may take furniture-finishing, rug-making, or other manual skills at the association's workshop located next door to the activity centre.

"They're patient enough to get it perfect, to get the wood satin-smooth. . . And the final achievement is that they're so thrilled with the product."

Miss Campbell-Sayers says people are often disappointed that the workshop doesn't produce more, even though they're delighted with the quality of what is produced.

"In this world unless you're a productive member of society you're considered defunct, meaningless. But there's more to life than dollars and cents."

"If we look at life in terms of dollars, we're sad."

The retarded have another set of values to teach us. They live in a world of basic emotions where joy is what happens when nothing goes wrong, and pain is when somebody hurts you, and love is for anybody who helps.

Miss Campbell-Sayers said: "I don't know anybody who's worked with retarded children who hasn't been a better person for it."

"They have a beauty of spirit. . . They're kind and understanding with each other, which is something in this day and age. And they give so much more than a normal child gives."

"To use a modern term, they're the original beautiful people."

The administrative staff of the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded consists of two people, Miss Campbell-Sayers and her secretary, Miss Ethel Brown. A training staff of four operates the activity centre and workshop.

The association's estimated budget in 1969 was $33,192, of which $25,592 came from the Community Chest.

The thrill is in perfection

But Immunotherapy Gaining

Cancer Shots 'Years Away'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Research work on a universal cancer vaccine is "off the launching pad" but success is "more years away than we'd like to admit," an Atlanta medical researcher said Wednesday.

Dr. Loren Humphrey of Emory University, who has been studying the development of vaccine immunity for 2½ years, predicted that stimulation of the body's natural resistance would eventually become a prime mechanism for controlling the spread of tumors.

"I think we'll be controlling cancer much better than we are now," he said. "A cure which would rid the body of cancer may be much further away. But there are people now who have had cancer for 10 years and only know it because it shows up on x-rays."

Humphrey said his research on 38 cancer patients indicated a universal vaccine—which would be given to healthy persons to prevent further development of cancer—may be feasible.

"We are accumulating evidence that bears on the development of a vaccine which might prevent everyone in this room from getting cancer," he said during a panel discussion on cancer treatment at the clinical conference of the American College of Surgeons.

But Humphrey emphasized his findings were "quite embryonic, not well established, and must not be overvalued."

He said immunotherapy—Injection of materials into the body to stimulate development of tumor-resistant anti-bodies—had been successful with eight of his patients and in 23 of 118 patients treated by other researchers, a 20-per-cent success rate.

"However, success is a relative word," Humphrey added. "It might mean prolongation of life for one or two months. The long-range benefits have been few and it's certainly not a method for terminal patients. Only two of my patients have survived for more than a year," he said.

Grand Opening.

Needless to say, you're invited.

We'd like to show you around our spanking new showroom. Then take you out back and show where we keep all the Volkswagen parts for all the Volkswagens out front. The big new service area where we service them, and the mechanics of it all.

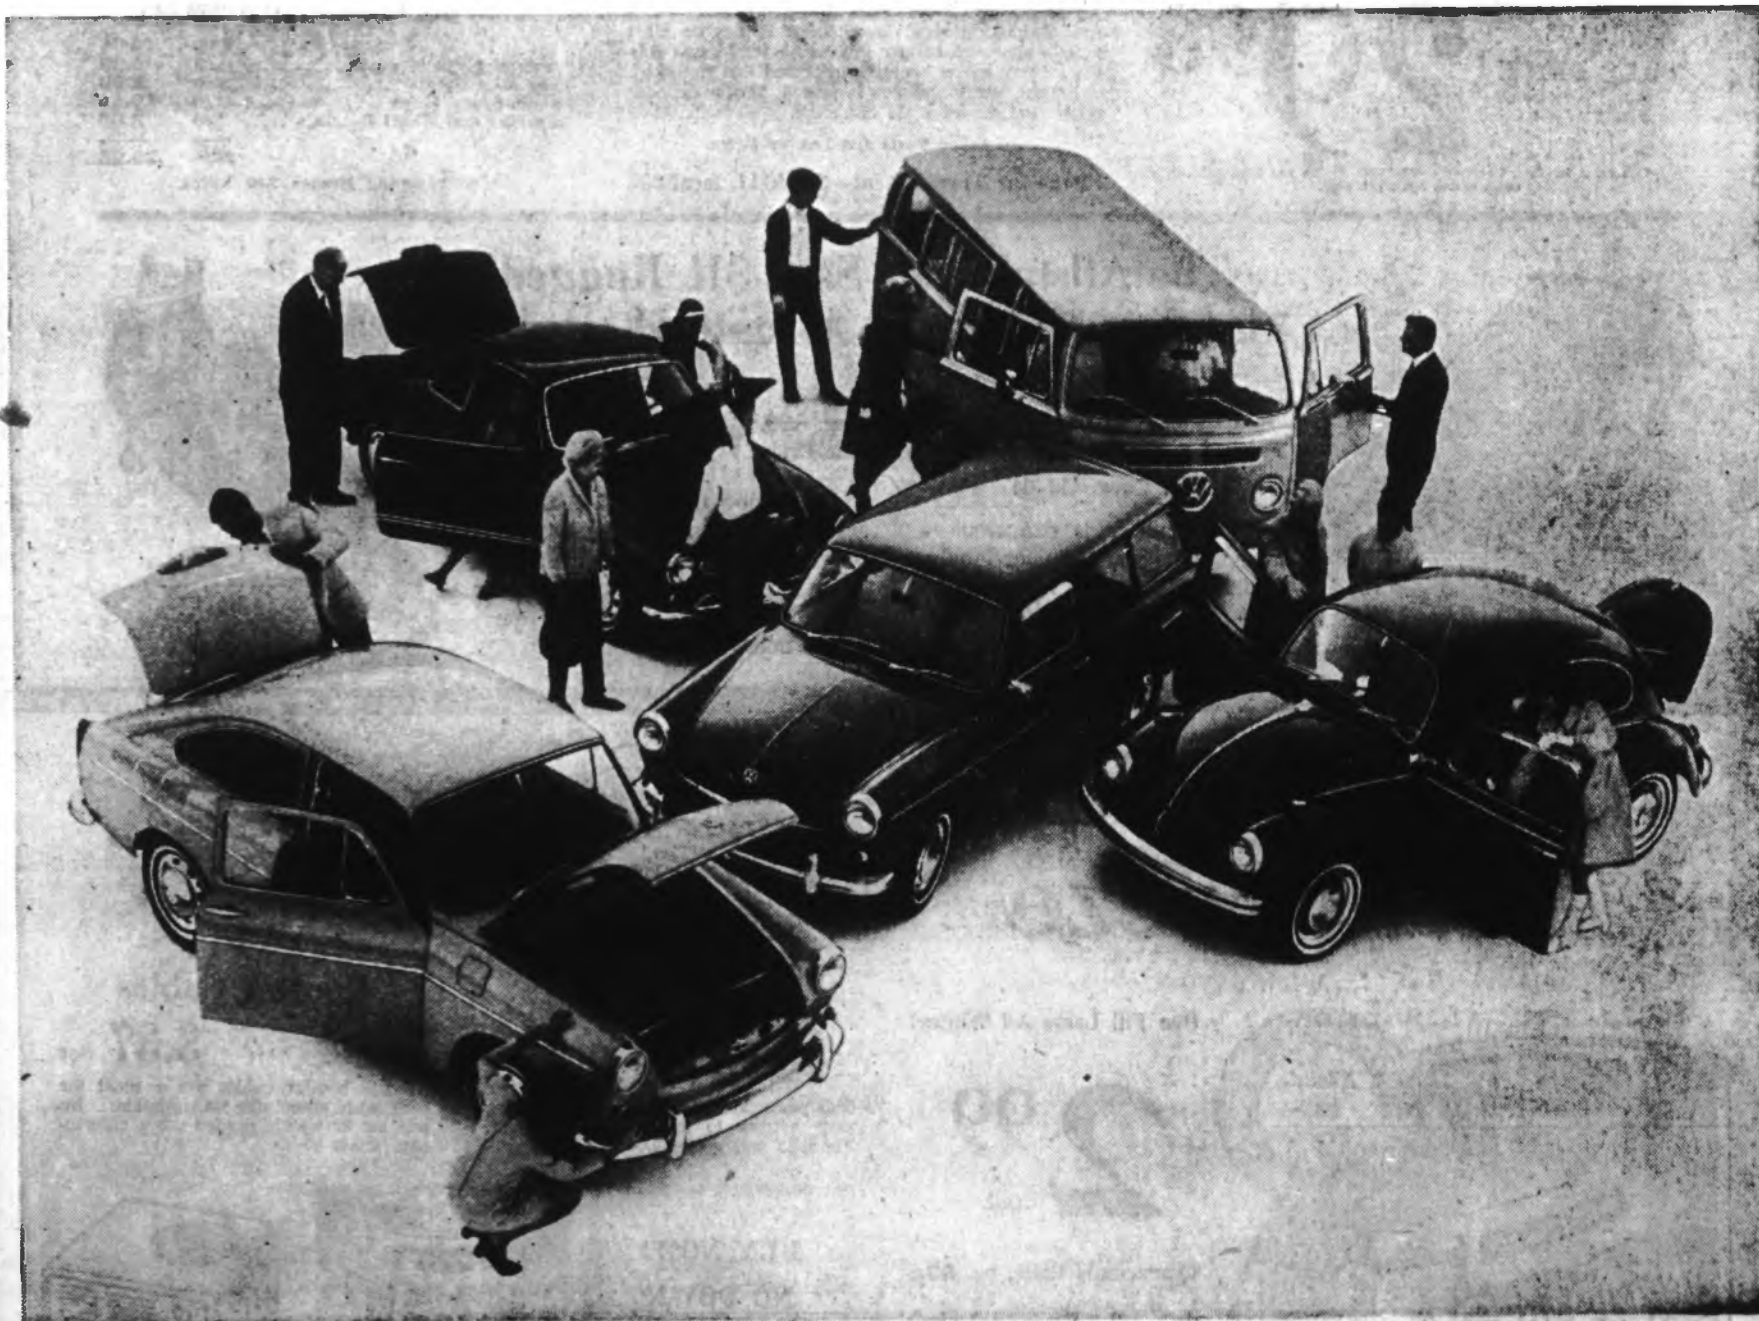

We'll throw open the doors of all our brand new Volkswagens: the Bug, Fastback, Squareback, Karmann Ghia and Station Bus. And we'll be around to answer any questions you might have about what makes a Volkswagen a Volkswagen.

There'll be refreshments (so bring the kids) and free rides for the adults: a spin around the block in the Volkswagen of your choice.

Even if you're not in the market for a new car, why not plan on doing some window shopping at our place.

Who knows? You might not need a new VW today, but you just might get the bug tomorrow.

Temple Art Brought To Gallery

By INA D. D. URTHOFF

An unusual and particularly interesting show of stone rubbings is on at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria for the next few weeks.

Originating in Boda Nath, Tamei Bagwambhai, Ganakar and other temples of Katmandu, the rubbings were made by Japanese artist Isamu Akino during a trip to this mountainous region to visit temples and shrines seldom seen by foreigners.

The stone reliefs, powerfully carved, were made during the past 1,000 years and have not been seen even by experts of this art form.

The method of working involves the wetting of the paper, generally a heavy rice paper, which is then formed around the sculpture.

rubbed over the paper, reproducing the carved relief.

Black and two shades of brown ink are used. The damp paper is allowed to dry and the rubbings are mounted on scroll backings.

The rubbings carry the atmosphere of the temples in the highest Himalayas and one can almost feel the resonance of the temple bell or the chanting of the itinerant monk.

As well as the stone rubbings, some additions have been made to the now famous Pollard collection. Early scrolls dating back to 1573 and 1615—a handsome mandala of the 12th century from the princely priest of the Tenda sect and a vigorously-handled drawing of a climbing dragon.

Sackbutts Revived

Volkswagen is giving us the business.

And we're taking it.
As of right now we're in the Volkswagen business.

And starting right now, we'll be putting our experience to work selling and servicing 1970 Bugs, Buses, Fastbacks, Notchbacks, Squarebacks and Karmann Ghias.

When we're not doing that, we'll be showing people around our lot full of completely reconditioned VWs. As well as making sure that anybody who needs part of a Volkswagen gets the part of a Volkswagen he needs.

Another part of the business that we're getting, is a service department full of the latest, specialized VW service equipment, including a complete diagnostic centre. Along with a staff of factory-trained VW mechanics who know all there is to know about what makes a Volkswagen go. (And how to get it going if it isn't.)

So, if you have a Volkswagen that needs a little attention, or some intention of getting a little Volkswagen, why not drop in? And give us the business.

Tiny Sub Frees Four Men Ensnared on Ocean Floor

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Four men trapped on the ocean floor in the research submarine Deep Quest for more than 12 hours were rescued Wednesday by a tiny, two-man sub.

The mini-submarine Nekton dived 432 feet to the bottom and severed a nylon line snarled on the experimental sub's propeller and the Deep Quest rose to the surface of the Pacific.

NOT WORRIED

Robert Worthington, 52, San Diego, a retired navy captain and pilot of the Deep Quest, said he and the other three men stranded in the 40-foot long craft were not worried about their oxygen running out.

"There wasn't any great doubt in our minds we would get up," Worthington said. "It was just which way to go. We could have come up at any time but we wanted to do it the safest way for the boat and personnel."

LITTLE SHILL

"I initially felt some trepidation but I didn't have any real feeling we could not get up. I just had a little chill or tremor here and there."

The others aboard were Donald Sauer, Marshall Woy and William Pinero, all San Diego residents.

The Deep Quest was on a routine training mission to find a 1,875-pound steel cylinder on the ocean floor and bring it to the surface. A nylon line attached to the cylinder became fouled in the sub's propeller five miles offshore.

SPEED VITAL

Speed was vital in the rescue attempt. The Deep Quest's self-contained oxygen supply was good for only 48 hours. The sub descended about noon Tuesday and it was 15 hours before it was freed by the Nekton.

The Nekton, a 4,000-pound craft operated by the General Oceanographic Co., made its dive at 2:25 a.m. Wednesday and pilot Douglas Privitt, 38, reported 25 minutes later he had the Deep Quest in sight.

There were some anxious moments when silt stirred up from the bottom by the activity impaired visibility, but little more than an hour after it dived, the Nekton reported the line had been cut by a diving knife taped to its 15-foot maneuverable arm.

On Feb. 28, 1969, the Deep Quest planted an American flag on the Pacific Ocean floor at a depth of 8,310 feet — the greatest underwater depth ever attained by a true submarine. The sub sustained no damage during its entanglement and the rescue attempt.

Pete Summers, program manager for the submarine, said, "there was never any doubt in my mind about the sub coming up." He said it could have come to the surface by itself, but only at a steep angle which would have damaged the craft.

There was no immediate explanation of how the rope became tangled with the propeller but Summers said the line should not have been left on the cylinder when it was dropped into the ocean for the Deep Quest to recover.

Warm Weather Raises Worries

Democracy

Brazil Given Pledge

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Gen. Emílio Garrastazu Médici, the new president of Brazil, promised Tuesday night to bring democratic government back to South America's largest country.

He said he would not tolerate the violence of the extreme left or the conservatism of the landowning industrialist oligarchy.

"At the end of my mandate I expect to leave a democracy definitively installed," Médici said in a television and radio address a few hours after the military high command chose him to replace ailing President Arthur da Costa e Silva.

He also pledged to limit the government's participation in the economy.

Margarine Tax Opposed

The Fisheries Association of B.C. has announced its support of a brief urging the removal of the 12 per cent federal sales tax on margarine.

The brief was submitted Tuesday to Finance Minister E. J. Benson by the Institute of Edible Oil Foods. It has also received support from the Fisheries Council of Canada, the Rapeseed Association of Canada and the Ontario Soya-Bean Growers' Marketing Board.

Companies producing margarine expect a reduction of several cents a pound to the consumer if the tax is removed.

LONDON (CP) — Mounting garbage piles festered in unusually warm weather Wednesday as pressure grew for an end to strikes by rubbish collectors in London and other British cities.

With the capital suffering most from the nasty smells and unsightly sidewalk obstacles produced by the uncollected refuse, the strikers gave no sign of moderating their insistence that a filthy day's work deserves a fair day's pay.

Wage talks scheduled today between union and municipal officials are expected to centre on demands for an all-round increase of 33 a week in the wages of 680,000 manual workers employed by cities and towns across Britain.

UP TO $22
But the London garbage men want a wage increase of $11.70, which would increase their weekly pay to $32.

They seemed anything but willing to accept the smaller raise and their demands could fire the spirit of the other manual employees, perennially discontented with wage levels.

The capital's garbage strike, in its 16th day Wednesday, is still unofficial.

UNION SUPPORT
However, the transport and general workers' union could swing in behind it if today's talks fizzle, and the walkout then would be official.

This also might lead the government to act in the situation instead of leaving settlement efforts up to the various municipalities.

One union estimate was that about 6,000 garbage collectors are on strike.

OTHERS OUT
Some 3,500 other manual workers are out too, among them grave-diggers and sewage attendants.

There were scuffles between strikers and men trying to dump rubbish, on private contract, from a wharf on the Thames River near London's Chelsea district.

Considerable public sympathy has gone out to the garbage men now that their wage plight and the value of their work have been demonstrated so pointedly.

Yet a prime worry is that of health, with rats and flies sure to benefit from the piles of rubbish.

Insurance Up for 'Missiles'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those superpowered cars with the big engines are racking up 56 per cent larger accident losses, an insurance executive told the U.S. Congress Wednesday.

Dean Jeffers, president of Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co., the fifth largest auto insurer in the United States, then announced at a Senate hearing that his firm is increasing by 50 per cent insurance rates on these cars to discourage their appeal. He called them "motorized missiles."

Jeffers said his firm doesn't consider owners of these cars unsafe drivers and acknowledged that "all these cars are not purchased for fast-driving thrills."

ABOVE NEEDS

But, he said, "these cars certainly are not conducive to moderate driving."

"Indeed, they are powered well above the needs of the prudent defensive driver and above the traffic capacity of most streets and roads."

Among cars listed under Nationwide's superpower category by Jeffers are the Corvette, Mustang Mach 1, Oldsmobile 422, Pontiac GTO, Plymouth Road Runner, Dodge Charger 500, AMX, Mitsu SS 380, and the Mercury Cougar Eliminator.

prompted by a special actuarial study made by his firm during a three-year period.

It showed, he said in testimony before the Senate anti-trust monopoly subcommittee, that the high-powered cars Detroit turns out to appeal to the "under-30 set," produce an average of 56 per cent more in accident losses than standard-powered cars.

"This much higher loss experience simply cannot be ignored," Jeffers said. "It is compelling evidence that insurance for overpowered cars should be priced higher. It is really the fair thing to do."

Relief Funds

Inspiring Hideout Shelters Arsonists

Continued Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES — Police Wednesday combed the city's Laurel Canyon area for two slippery arsonists who:

- Escaped from a vacant mansion in full view of dozens of firemen.
- Euded police who chased them up a hill, shooting, by rolling rocks down at their pursuers.
- Penetrated a 10-acre forest of flames to make their dash for freedom.

Oh yes, The mansion they fled once was owned by Harry Houdini.

Dahlia Surgery

In yesterday's column I gave some details on when and how to take up the dahlia roots for winter storage under cover. Because of space limitations, I could give only the barest details of the techniques used, and there are one or two points I would like to explain a bit more fully.

First, should the clumps of dahlia roots be stored whole or divided into individual tubers before storing?

Actually, there are some solid advantages in dividing them before storage. For one thing, individual tubers take up a lot less space than the awkward whole clumps. Trouble is, it isn't easy for a novice to cut up the clumps without spoiling the tubers, and if you don't know how or doubt your ability to perform this surgery, it would be safer to store the clumps whole and do the dividing in the spring. Once the tubers start to sprout, you can see much more clearly where to make your cuts.

If your storage space is limited, though, and you'd like to take a crack at dividing, this is how you go about it:

First, let's take a look at one of your dahlia clumps. There is a hollow central stem—the stub of last year's topgrowth—and radiating outward from this stem are the tubers, each one looking rather like a skinny sweet potato. Each of these tubers is capable of producing a plant on its own next year.

The important part of the tuber is its neck—the thin end where it joins the central stem. The eye of the tuber—the only part of it capable of sprouting—is in this thin neck, and it is very important to get all this neck when the tuber is cut free from the clump, for if the eye is lost, the tuber will not grow.

To make sure each tuber has its growth eye intact, then, it is best to take a sliver of the central stem with your knife when detaching the tuber from its clump.

Another important point is labelling. If you were growing a named variety, there was probably a wired label attached to the plant or the stake; this label should have been transferred to the stub of the clump when first dug up from the ground. If you divide your clumps, each tuber should be labelled, and an easy way is to write its name directly on the skin of the tuber, using a felt-tipped India-ink marking pen or an indelible pencil.

Labelling is much more important than appears at first glance, for if you plant up your garden next year with a hodgepodge of unnamed tubers, chances are you'll place all the tall ones in the front row and all the shorties in the back of the bed where you can't see them. If your dahlias are unnamed or the labels are lost, at least label them with the height of the plant and the color of the flower so you can plant intelligently next spring.

In yesterday's column I recommended burying dahlia tubers in peat moss, vermiculite or fir bark, and this may seem an unnecessary expense.

All I can say is this: I have tried just about every possible method of storage—dipping the tubers in hot wax, spraying them with liquid plastic, sealing them in plastic bags, covering them with sand or ashes—but I have never run across anything that works quite so well as plunging them in peat moss, fir bark or vermiculite.

While you may have to put out a couple of dollars for your peat moss material, remember that this isn't money down the drain. When your dahlia tubers are taken out and planted next spring, you still have your peat moss, either to use again for bulb storage or for the dozen and one uses in the garden. These materials are wonderful for starting seeds or rooting slips in the house, for mixing with houseplant soil, and for the improvement of the soil texture in the garden.

Who Needs Them?

The decision to do away with the U.S. state department by 1972, recommended in the now-famous Dawk Report, was not a sudden one.

It had been under study for several months by President Nixon's commission on obsolete government organizations. The chairman of the committee, Donald Dawk, told me in an exclusive interview in his office:

"We concluded after many hearings that the state department no longer fulfilled a function and the money saved by abolishing the state department could well be spent building up our naval nuclear forces."

"How did you come to this conclusion?" I asked.

"We found out during our investigation that the state department, under our present form of government, no longer has much to do with foreign policy. Most foreign policy is decided by either the

Cecil Rhodes Next

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Pat McGoonan, back in the U.S. for The Moonshine War, told me he was recently in South Africa seeking government cooperation for the biggest project of his career — a film biography of Cecil Rhodes. This will be a big one — the diamond mines, the Boer War and the founding of the Union of South Africa.

But here's a blow: Pat, the suave British actor, will not be starring in the film. He will produce and possibly direct, "but I am not right for the role of Rhodes." I've rarely heard an actor be so modest. But don't get the idea that McGoonan, so popular in this country and Britain because of his "secret agent" (Danger Man) TV series, has given up the art of acting. After The Moonshine War, Pat fulfills a long-time plan to star in Tai-Pan, from the James Clavell novel.

McGoonan has joined the British and American actors who live in Switzerland, where his three daughters are in school. The oldest, 17, wants to be a director, and this is not easy in a world where women are more or less barred from this exacting chore. Ida Lupino made it, also Jona Marston, and currently, Elaine May, but it is harder for a woman to break through in this field than for a non-relative of a cameraman to join that exclusive lensers union in Hollywood. If you are related, you have a chance. If not, choose another career.

I think this is wrong. All professions should be wide open, to allow for new, talented people to have a chance. Especially in the film industry which depends for survival, now more than at any other time, on new ideas. I was shocked when the British union covering most areas of film-making — actors, directors etc. — stated that no new members would be admitted, because so many of them were out of work. It is true that production in London, as in Hollywood, is at low ebb, but new blood could revitalize the big companies.

Perhaps some of those who are out of work are unemployable. And, for heaven's sake, how did they get accepted into these hard-to-break-into unions?

"True," I said. "Yet it seems to me that there is a certain amount of tradition associated with the state department that we're all going to miss when it's gone."

"This is so, but the state department is a losing proposition. The public never gets to see what it's getting for its money. As one witness put it 'You never get a bang for your buck in State,' whereas with defence, for every buck you spend, you know there's going to be a bang somewhere."

"What will you do with the state department building in Washington?"

"We'll keep the main floor for issuing passports and we'll try to keep as many ambassadors on as we can, processing visas and working in the cafeteria. But the rest of the building will probably be used as a marine corps annex."

"Overseas, the American embassies will be taken over by Defence. This incidentally should be a very smooth transition, since two out of three employees in our embassies abroad now work either for the defence department or the CIA anyway."

"Do you believe that the Dawk Report will run into opposition in Congress?" I asked.

"I don't know why. Congress always gives the military everything it asks for."

Cult of Indifference

DR. STUART ROSENBERG

There has grown up in our society a youth culture that is not only indifferent to the adult world, but belligerently so.

It is a culture disengaged from adult values, unwilling to become part of a world it regards as frightened and fraudulent.

It rejects adult delinquency as vigorously as some elders reprove the juvenile variety.

The youth culture wants to remain young and part of the "honest" non-adult world as long as possible. It therefore works long and hard at delaying the passage to that domain of shame, posturing and deceptive guile it regards as adult-dom.

Perhaps this explains the amazing lack of rebellion now noticeable in some thoughtful young people. When a child rebels against a parent a very positive thing takes place. It means that the young person has been in dialogue with the parent at some point, and wishes to demonstrate his own independence as a person by winning the elder over to his persuasive way.

But we are now witnessing something new. Today, many children are no longer rebelling against their parents; they are simply indifferent to them. They no longer seem to be walking all over their parents — they see through them.

There is no point in pressing for a victory over a parent who represents nothing you really covet for yourself.

A hundred years ago parents used to quote Scriptures to their children: "Thou shalt not!" Fifty years ago they twisted this into: "Perhaps it would be better if you didn't!" Today, they tell their children: "Love me — and do as you please!"

afraid of their children's rebellions that they end up standing for very little, indeed. A vicious cycle sets in: their children don't rebel, but they have little regard for the moral ambiguities of the adult world.

Permissiveness, paradoxically, is precisely wrong; it does not, can not, win the hearts of our children. Parents who are not teachers, who do not require assignments to be fulfilled, who do not explain and live by rules they believe necessary for a better life, are simply irrelevant.

In short, if they won't take a stand, they haven't, for long, a leg to stand on.

Their young ones will fly away, homeless and hapless.

Husband's Confession Heard in Goldstream Gas Death

'I Did It Because I Loved Her'

Bulk carriers ride at anchor in Royal Roads, awaiting end of longshoremen's strike to pick up lumber at Ogden Point

Jurors Challenge Missing Hours

"I loved my wife," Lawrence Ernest Munning said in a confession introduced by the crown at his murder trial Wednesday.

"She wanted to die . . . I did it because I loved her."

The introduction of a confession brought the crown's case against the 41-year-old Oak Bay machinist — on trial for the carbon-monoxide death of his wife Catherine — to a close.

The prosecution admitted that it could not account for a "missing" two hours on the afternoon of Catherine's death.

Explanation Asked

As prosecutor E. George MacMinn told Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court, "That is the case for the crown, My Lord," the foreman of the jury stood and said the jury wanted to put a question to the last prosecution witness.

"We have noticed that the accused says his wife was dead at around 2:30 p.m., maybe 3 p.m. We accept that he drove her body immediately to the RCMP detachment at Colwood," the foreman said.

"But he did not arrive there, according to all the evidence, until 5:10 p.m. Have you any explanation for this missing two hours?"

The crown's final witness, RCMP Cpl. Robert Hugh De Armond, hesitated and then said, "No, sir. We can't account for that time."

Munning is charged with the non-capital murder of his wife, Catherine Josephine Munning, 36, at a Goldstream Park campsite on June 2. The trial enters its fourth day today.

An earlier witness, RCMP Cpl. Harold Peterson, testified that he and Cpl. De Armond had taken a statement from the accused man about an hour after he had brought his wife's body to the station.

'She Wanted to Die'

The confession, signed by Munning and initialed by him on each page, was ruled admissible Tuesday and entered as Exhibit 24 in the trial, which began Monday. Cpl. Peterson read it to the jury.

"I loved my wife," the statement said, "but I did not want to commit her to Essondale. She wanted to die. I promised her I would not let them send her to a place like that."

"My wife was very hard to live with. But I didn't kill her because I hated her. I did it because I loved her. She was going to kill herself anyway. She told her doctors that."

"I went out there (Goldstream Park) with the intention of getting it over with, you know. I thought I would die, too."

"I went out and cashed a lot of cheques. I thought we would spend a few days having a good time, and then I would kill her."

"I was going to kill myself, too, but I chickened out. I know I am responsible."

Trudeau Hopes Public Aware

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau hopes that out of Montreal's wildcat police and firemen's strikes with the resulting death, looting, shooting and fire-bombing in the chaotic streets, will come a keener public awareness of the importance of upholding law and order.

It was urgent, he added, that the taxpayers appreciate both the importance of the police and the "very tough" job they face in maintaining order and providing protection.

He underlined it all by repetition of the word "importance." He had spoken in this vein previously — once when addressing students at Queen's University, and again when commenting on the rough-housing that young hoodlums had given him at Vancouver.

But Thursday, coming out of a morning-long cabinet session he made it sound more urgent than ever. With what he called "total society running a little amok" — quickly amending this to "a little out of control" — he stressed the "importance of the public standing up for the police."

This "breakdown of law and order," as he termed it, not confined to Montreal alone, was "everybody's business." And too often, when doing their best with "one of the toughest jobs in the country," police have been abused as "pigs, fascists and Gestapo."

While violence and rampage in the streets was "not a Montreal phenomenon," police in that Quebec metropolis had "a harder job" than most. Yes, he readily conceded, the police strike was "clearly illegal," and while "not condoning it," he said there was "something to say on both sides."

In Montreal, he went on, police had been "pretty badly battered by both criminal and political violence," and this must be "taken into account" in assessing responsibility and blame. What "political" violence, he was asked?

"Demonstrations, violent ones; attacks, separatism," he replied.

A CBC reporter irritated the prime minister with the question: "Is this the final breakdown of law and order?"

"Certainly not," snapped the prime minister, police had struck at other times and in other places, even in Canada, and there was "no cause for that kind of alarm" over the ravage of downtown Montreal. It was serious enough, but it wasn't the end. It did, the prime minister emphasize, bring to public attention the urgency "now of

New Mountie Boss 'Entitled'—But Once

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said with a grin Wednesday he does not believe RCMP Commissioner William Higgett will be holding many news conferences.

He was replying to a reporter who asked about the newly-appointed commissioner's statement at a news conference Monday that he hoped the Canadian government would keep down the number of Communist Chinese diplomats here if it exchanged diplomatic missions with Peking because these diplomats would be spies.

Trudeau said he had not read a transcript of Commissioner Higgett's remarks but that the commissioner was entitled to meet reporters once to express his views. He did not think the commissioner would be seeing the press again too often.

Shouldn't Have to Tell—Wallace

Doctors' Income 'Private'

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — The British Columbia Medical Association Wednesday supported a doctor-MLA who said doctors should not have to disclose individual earnings from government medical plans.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace, Social Credit MLA-elect for Oak Bay, said there have been demands for such disclosure. They followed Health Minister Ralph Lofmark's statement that some doctors earn too much under government insurance plans. The association's annual convention passed unanimously a resolution saying: "Whereas doctors' incomes are not derived from public funds, their individual earnings should not be disclosed."

The convention elected Dr. George J. Gibson of Chilliwack as president, succeeding Dr. Robert M. Lane of Victoria. Dr. Gibson is a former council and school board member in Chilliwack. The doctors also passed a resolution asking that ambulance drivers lose their right to use sirens and disregard traffic regulations while going to hospitals.

"The use of sirens and the breaking of traffic laws has been shown to shorten the average eight-mile run by only two minutes," said Dr. R. M. Peet, Victoria neurologist.

Tugboat Men Considering Own Strike

VANCOUVER (CP)—A dozen grain ships will start arriving in Vancouver Saturday and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said again Wednesday that, dock strike or no dock strike, export grain will be moved.

Negotiations continued here Wednesday in a bid to end a pay strike by 3,000 British Columbia longshoremen. Meanwhile, 1,300 tugboat officers and engineers said they may strike in a separate dispute.

Three grain ships are in Vancouver but loading has been stopped by the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association, which says the emphasis on grain discriminates against other products.

Pressure for keeping grain moving continued Wednesday. Mr. Mackasey said in Ottawa once more that grain "will move." But again, he didn't say how this will be accomplished.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, also in Ottawa, said that if the strike does not end soon, Parliament should be recalled to end it. Parliament is in recess until Oct. 22.

Mr. Mackasey said ships will start arriving Saturday to move Canada's 80,000,000-bushel wheat sale to China. He gave no details of movement plans but excluded the use of military ships.

Mr. Stanfield said Mr. Mackasey has been "doing a lot of talking" but action is needed. The labor minister has said he is prepared to ask for recall of Parliament if needed. But he did not know when such a move might become necessary in the public interest.

He said hundreds of Prairie farmers could go bankrupt unless grain moves.

Medical Science Defied By Sex-Altered Woman

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Dawn Hall Simmons, British-born author who stunned Charleston society with sex-change surgery and a subsequent marriage to a Negro Mechanic, now claims to have baffled medical science by giving birth to "a miracle child."

She said the child, a seven-pound girl, was born in the Midwest Sept. 16, but refuses to identify the hospital or her doctor.

In an interview at her home Wednesday, Mrs. Simmons said: "I believe that God is higher than medical science and that's my explanation. She's a miracle child and will be a great blessing to the black people."

Mrs. Simmons, the former foster son and now foster daughter of British actress Dame Margaret Rutherford, said she named the child Bathsheba Marjorie Margaret Paul Simmons.

"My child will be brought to Charleston in about three weeks," she said. "Then I'm going to put her in a baby carriage and walk her right down on that lily-white battery."

The ante-bellum mansions on the battery, Charleston's historic waterfront, house many of the aristocratic Charlestonians in whose society Mrs. Simmons, then known as Gordon Langley Hall, was once welcome.

Mrs. Simmons who will be 40 on Oct. 16, is married to John Paul Simmons, who now works on a shrimp boat. He is about 25. They were married Jan. 23 by a minister at her historic home on Society Street.

"We named the baby Bathsheba because in the Bible Bathsheba was the beloved of David, and they were criticized for their love," she said.

Mrs. Simmons said the baby was born a few weeks prematurely because "I had been so harassed by newspaper people, then my husband had a very bad nerve turn and my doberman pinscher got killed by a car the same day."

Obstruction to Peace?

Canadian Attitude Scored by Biafra

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — An official from Biafra charged Wednesday that Canada's attitude is an obstruction to peace talks aimed at ending the Nigerian civil war.

Dr. Hugué Eke, Biafran education minister, also said in a press conference and later in an interview that the United States is hoping that Biafrans "will be starved into submission" and is asking church groups to stop night flights into Biafra.

Asked whether he thinks the same thing is happening in Canada, he replied "I'm not certain." Asked whether this "may" be happening in Canada, he said "Yes."

ONLY AT NIGHT

At present only night flights, supported by various church groups are reaching Biafra. The Red Cross suspended daylight flights after one of its craft was shot down by a Nigerian Air Force plane.

Biafra has rejected a Nigeria-Red Cross agreement that would allow Red Cross daylight flights to start again. Eke said Biafra is demanding that certain clauses relating to Biafran security be deleted. He said hunger still is a serious problem in Biafra and called for more flights.

LIKE QUEBEC

Eke compared Canada's "peculiar" attitude on the civil war with the federal government's attitude toward Quebec. He said the Canadian government feels that if it supports the breaking away of a region it would be supporting a separate Quebec.

The minister rejected this attitude, saying that Quebec is too advanced and sophisticated to be compared with Biafra.

Eke charged that Britain and the U.S. had used pressure against Canada to keep her from inserting the Biafran question into the UN. Britain had used Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith of Canada to bring pressure on Prime Minister Trudeau.

AT ALL COSTS

He said the U.S. and Canada are partially responsible for the lack of peace talks because of their support of the Nigerian federal government and blamed Britain and the Soviet Union for saying there must be one Nigeria "at all costs." This refers to the Nigerian demand that any peace settlement must leave

Nigeria and Biafra as one country.

But Eke took an important step toward meeting the Nigerian demand. He said that Biafra will not insist as it has in the past on maintaining the sovereignty of the breakaway region.

ONE CONDITION

Biafra was willing to meet Nigeria at any time "to sort things out" with the only precondition being that there must be no fighting during the talks. If Biafra could present a plan under which the safety of the Ibo, predominant tribe of Biafra, was guaranteed inside and outside the region "we would take it."

Asked how Canada could affect peace talks, he said Canada has the respect of most African countries and influence with other countries. The fact that she was both French- and English-speaking gave her contacts with about 80 per cent of the countries of Africa.

If she took a neutral stand she could use her prestige to help bring about talks. The minister

Tories Would Restore U.K. Military Presence

BRIGHTON, England — The Conservative party Wednesday affirmed its determination to restore Britain's military and naval presence in the South Atlantic and east of Suez if it wins the next general election.

Delegates to the annual party convention also voted to rebuild the home army and civil defence forces, both sharply curtailed by the Labor government for economy reasons.

The party rank-and-file enthusiastically cheered Geoffrey Rippon, Conservative spokesman on defence matters, when he said a Tory government would reverse the Labor government's policy of withdrawal from the Far East, the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf, and would provide the necessary naval strength and air support for British bases there.

This last pre-election conference was, however, apprehensive that the victory the Tories were preparing to celebrate in advance might not be won.

A national opinion poll, dropped like a bomb on the 4,000 delegates on opening day, reported that the enormous Tory popularity of seven months ago — 25 per cent lead over Labor — had plummeted to 4 per cent, the lowest since the Labor government devalued the pound two years ago and incurred the wrath of the voters with tight economic squeezes.

The poll also found Tory leader Edward Heath's standing with the electorate still falling. Now only 27 per cent think he would make a good prime minister. Prime Minister Harold Wilson's standing continued to rise, however, to 50 per cent who say he does a good job. A Gallup Poll Tuesday gave similar results.

The Tories had expected to lose more ground after the successful Labor party meeting here last week, especially since Labor's improvement at the polls had begun before the economic upswing was registered last month.

Ney Proposes Study

Artifact Protection Urged

NANAIMO — Frank Ney, as MLA-elect, said that when the Legislature opens in 1970, he will suggest a study of ways to protect artifacts and artifacts pertaining to British Columbia's history and natural resources.

In an interview Wednesday, he said, "I'm considering suggesting in the next Legislature, that the provincial government study policies of other countries to protect their treasures."

Egypt and surrounding countries have laws prohibiting removal or destruction of findings. In South America, I'm told, the governments deal very harshly with people who find ancient Indian artifacts and don't report them to government officials. Some countries have arrangements whereby the items are bought from the finder and then put into museums.

"No one is allowed to vandalize the pyramids but our Indian artifacts — as hard to replace — are left entirely without protection.

"There should be heavy fines facing those who deface any form of our historic art and this should cover findings of caves such as were reported last week.

"In Bermuda, the caves are protected by law. We should have similar protection.

"Frankly, I feel that in many cases, the government would be better off leasing these to private enterprise, so that they could be better protected. For instance, if our local Petroglyph Park were run by private enterprise, there would possibly be a tea garden that sold pamphlets on the history of the ancient stone writings and maps of other findings. The petroglyphs would be protected round the clock because it would be the proprietor's income at stake.

"As it is now, vandals are defacing the area and throwing bottles all over," Mr. Ney said.

As mayor, he said his suggestion to institute a halloween party for youth and young adults was being met with increasing support.

Among those who have indicated they would attend an open meeting in the Bowen Park complex, Thursday night were the Chamber of Commerce, the Jaycees, and merchants associations of both Harbor Park and Northbrook shopping malls.

"If we give the young people something to do and somewhere to go, perhaps we can avoid the unfortunate occurrences of recent years. I'm fully convinced that our youth would rather make merry than make trouble, given half a chance," he said.

In both roles, as mayor and MLA, he said he was hoping for much wider support of another event — the largest armada to ever grace the seas.

"I feel if Nanaimo is to put on an event in centennial year that will get wide publicity, consideration should be given to amassing the largest armada the world has ever seen.

The bathtub race, of course, will almost automatically get worldwide attention. But in centennial year, we should invite every type of water borne craft in the Pacific Northwest to gather in the port of Nanaimo to accompany the bathtub over.

"Every yacht club in the Pacific Northwest, tugboat companies, canoes, barges, kayaks, subs, naval vessels and other floating craft should be included in the hope that we could gather at least 10,000 vessels. It would be a sight the world has never seen before nor would ever see again.

"If this catches on and the word spreads through the waterfront grapevine, this together with the three days of fun and merriment prior to the bathtub race could catch the imagination of everyone and bring yachtsmen from all over, just out of curiosity," Mayor Ney said.

In Hospital

CAMPBELL RIVER — Average number of persons in Campbell River and district general hospital during August was 80 adults, children, and seven newborn. Average length of stay for adults in the acute newborn 7.8 days; and for occupants of the extended care unit 189 days.

Two hundred and thirty-seven adult patients were admitted to the acute hospital, three to the extended care unit and 37 to the nursery. Out-patients' departments treated 1,191 patients.

Delay Predicted In Caves Check

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said Wednesday that it might be several months before parks department officials could make an on-the-spot assessment of the value of recent cave discoveries near Port Alberni.

"I'm told there is a water problem in the caves," he said in an interview. "Our parks people are going in to see what's there and recommend the proper procedure to adopt regarding the caves. But since there have been heavy rains we might have to wait until spring before we can check them out."

Meanwhile, Mr. Kiernan said, the government isn't at all concerned about the possible destruction of recreational potential in the caves. The group whose explorations recently disclosed the full extent of the cave formation has kept the location secret.

A preliminary check of government records, however, indicates the caves are located on crown land in a tree farm licence area. The property cannot be removed from a tree farm licence without a special cabinet order, and the minister indicated this would not be granted until the government was ready to protect the caves.

"Judging by the pictures I have seen, these caves are no place for amateurs to be wandering about, in the first place," Mr. Kiernan said. "Then there is the possibility of actual physical damage to cave formations by casual visitors who decide to take home a sample."

The minister also indicated the government might impose stricter control upon visitors to Kody Caves, a 155-acre Class A part established in 1966 on the west arm of Kootenay Lake.

Council Bans Hunting On Half of Mountain

NORTH COWICHAN — Delegations for and against the banning of hunting on Maple Mountain debated the issue at North Cowichan council meeting Wednesday, and council's final decision was to ban hunting on just half of the mountain.

"On Aug. 20 when a petition was presented to us on hunting on Maple Mountain we passed a resolution to take no action," said Mayor Donald Morton.

"Now we have had 10 letters and some petitions to ban hunting on the mountain so it is time we reviewed the matter once again."

SAFETY COURSES

Ed Mankelov, director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, spoke on behalf of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club, 150 members, and the Chemainus Rod and Gun Club, 95 members.

He explained that the organized hunting sportsman is concerned and that there are junior firearm safety courses offered.

"The course is not to make a hunter but to make safe handling of firearms. Last year there were 420 young people put through the course in the Cowichan district and there is a course just starting with 25 enrolled," he said.

He also explained that there are nine members of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club that are already qualified to instruct the expected mandatory hunting lessons.

"We are responsible people and we realize our responsibility," he said.

TOO DANGEROUS

"We do more than just pay lip service to firearm regulations. When we hear of hunting being detrimental to people on Maple Mountain we will be the first to ask that it be closed down. To date we have not heard of anyone being endangered."

Mr. Mankelov said that he thought hunting on Arbutus Avenue at Maple Bay was too dangerous and that south of the most southerly powerline on the mountain should be a no shooting area.

"If the municipality is willing, we in the Chemainus club would offer to purchase, post and maintain signs to make sure the area is well posted." He closed his discussion by adding that hunting is a legitimate sport and a legitimate recreation.

MANY SCARED

Letters and petitions, all for banning hunting entirely, were then read and comments were heard from the delegation of private individuals on their views as to why hunting should be banned.

"Maple Mountain is primarily a park and we should give the greatest use for the greatest number," said Kurt Horn of Maple Bay. "A lot of people would be scared to venture up the mountain. As well as giving serious consideration to the closing of Maple Mountain for hunters I think the municipality should review all areas."

Ald. Margaret Robertson then submitted a resolution stating that hunting should be prohibited on Maple Mountain and that the boundaries should be south of Adelaide Street, Crofton, east of Osborne Bay Road and north of Herd Road.

OTHER AREAS

"I am not against hunting but there are other areas in the municipality for hunting," she stressed. "The park is not being put to full utilization by hikers and riders because of fall hunting."

Ald. Tom Burge said he thought the amendment banning the use of rifles only should be added to the first resolution. "All reasons for banning hunting on Maple Mountain are pertinent to all the municipality whether rifles or shotguns," said Ald. Dennis Hogan. "I agree with Mr. Horn to eventually look at the whole area."

Ald. Gerry Smith said he thought they were discriminating against the hunter and that many hunters were on shift work. He suggested council postpone voting on the resolution until they had a full council. Ald. John Cannon was absent from the meeting.

The motion that the matter be tabled was not seconded by any members of council. Ald. Smith then proposed the amendment that hunting be allowed north of the main entrance of the road on Maple Mountain Park for three months of the year and that they work in connection with the rod and gun club to post no hunting signs on the south side.

In rebuttal a spokesman for the hunters stated that the use of the mountain for three months of the year by the hunter is not asking much.

NOT SATISFIED

The resolution and the two amendments to the resolution were defeated by a tie in the voting. Ald. Lars Fowler, Ald. Hogan and Ald. Smith voted against banning hunting on the mountain and Ald. Robertson, Mayor Morton and Ald. Burge voted for it. Mayor Morton said that although the motion was defeated it had to be reviewed again and suggested they move on to new business.

Mr. Mankelov said the decision had not satisfied the people nor him. "We have agreed hunting is unsafe in some areas on the mountain but everything is still the same."

RESOLUTION

Council then agreed to a resolution that hunting be prohibited from the entrance to Maple Mountain and on Herd Road east of Osborne Bay Road. "One-half of the area originally proposed will be closed," said Mayor Morton.

In other news: Ald. Robertson will receive 50 cents from each alderman for every lap she swims in the swimathon at Brentwood College, Mill Bay, at 10:00 a.m. Nov. 2. The swimathon is in aid of the $100,000 needed to build a pool proposed by the Op-Rec Society in Duncan.

Qualicum Refuses Rezoning Attempt

QUALICUM BEACH — Council again refused a request for rezoning at the regular meeting this week.

A letter had been received from W. C. Eccles, of Nanaimo, asking permission to use the property at the corner of the Island Highway and Cypress Street as a guesthouse.

The area is zoned for single family dwellings and two similar requests, one for a nursing home and one for a motel have already been turned down.

Alderman T. Parker again disagreed with council, and while agreeing with the decision, Alderman O. Sharnan said it was a pity they had to turn down all attempts at development.

Alderman O. Norton said there were still large areas zoned commercially or for multifamily dwellings, suitable for development. Mayor D. Danks said he wished prospective developers would study the map in the village office which showed these areas quite clearly.

Help for the Qualicum Bay Horse Lake Waterworks District in making two connections near the Big Qualicum River was agreed to but, with more than sufficient work within their own boundaries, council did not feel it could commit the staff to help with any maintenance in the future.

A complaint from Gilbert Mart, one of Qualicum's original settlers, with regard to the lack of culverts at the access to the fields on his 100 acre farm, came up for discussion.

Superintendent of works, Bill Penman pointed out that the drainage put in by Mr. Mart had been removed by the Department of Highways when they raised the levels of Faren and Fern Roads before those areas had come within the municipality. It is not village policy to install more than one culvert per property but Alderman Parker thought a culvert at the corner of Qualicum Road and Mart Road could be considered essential and this installation was approved.

A quotation of $380 from P. McCaffery for the painting to be done to the inside of the health unit and the village office was accepted.

Hovercraft Stymied By Lack of Laws

Unless something is done to set up regulations for the operation of hovercraft on passenger routes, Canada will not have this type of transportation, the managing director of Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. said Wednesday.

Barry Jones of the Vancouver firm said the federal transport department's marine services division has jurisdiction. His company has suspended daily service between Nanaimo and Vancouver because of what he called "a limbo of operating regulations."

A final method of licensing pilots is in the offing, he said, but there is still no definite word on the licensing of engineers.

His firm has been operating a 35-passenger hovercraft on the Vancouver-Nanaimo service since February.

New Dock Nearly Ready

DEEP BAY — A new boat dock under construction at Deep Bay by the federal department of Public Works will be a welcome addition to the facilities of this much-used harbor.

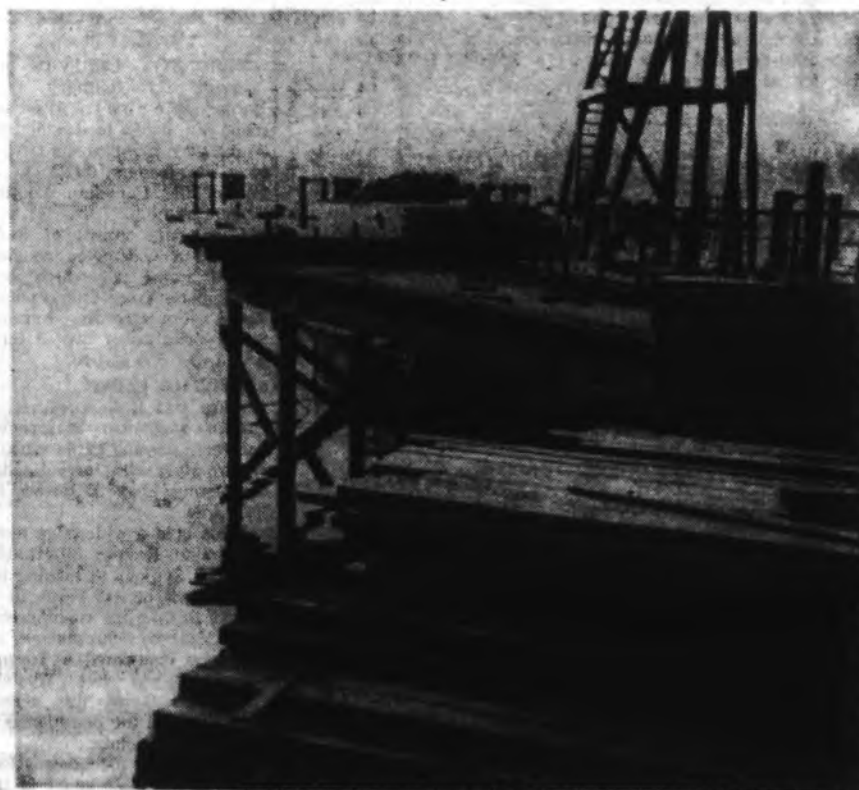

Harbor Pilddriving Ltd., of Nanaimo was awarded the contract at the end of July, covering demolition of the existing structure and the new construction.

Removal of the old dock started Aug. 7. The new dock is in advanced stages of construction, and scheduled for completion by the end of the month.

Due to its sheltered location and close proximity to active fishing areas, Deep Bay has for years been home-port for the commercial salmon fishing fleet working in that part of the Gulf of Georgia.

The new dock will be 453 feet long by 12 feet wide, with a 60 by 40 foot turnaround area at the dockhead. With this type of construction vehicles will be able to travel right to the dockhead to deliver supplies and equipment to the fleet.

The dock was designed by Al Marr of the department and Bill Pollock's construction inspector for the government.
